TOWNS IN EDINBURGHSHIRE.

CALDER, MID, EAST, AND WEST.

MID-CALDER is a parish and village—the latter 12 miles W.S.W. from Edinburgh, and 8½ E. from Whitburn; pleasantly situated on the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, on an eminence between the water of Linnhouse and the Almond; and Calder wood, which is of considerable extent, overhangs it. The minerals in this parish consist of various beds of rich bituminous shale, from which a large quantity of paraffin oil and other chemical products are extracted at the different works. Coal abounds in the parish, and on the estate of Calder House, the property of Lord Torphichen, is an extensive bed of freestone of excellent quality. The parish church is a fine specimen of Gothic architecture, enlarged and restored at a cost of upwards of £3,000. It was originally founded by Duncan, Earl of Fife, in the early part of the thirteenth century, and was rebuilt on the original site by Peter Sandilands, a scion of the noble family of Torphichen, in 1541. A United Presbyterian chapel is the only other place of worship. To the west of the village is Calder House, the seat of Lord Torphichen, where the picture of John Knox is hung in the hall in which he first dispensed the sacrament of the Lord's Supper after the Reformation. The house of Greenbank, in the vicinity, is celebrated as the birth-place of John Spottiswoode, Archbishop of St. Andrews. Fairs are held in this village on the second Tuesday in March and Friday after second Tuesday in October. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,634; of the village, 579.

EAST CALDER is a small village, lying one mile E. from Mid Calder, on the south road from Edinburgh to Glasgow. It was originally a parish of itself, but is now conjoined with Kirknewton. At the west end of the village are to be seen the ruins of the ancient parish church, built by Randolph de Clere, in the twelfth century, and dedicated to St. Cuthbert. Population in 1871, 589.

WEST CALDER is a village in the rather extensive parish of its name, the latter being about 10 miles in length and 5½ in breadth. The village is about 5 miles from Mid-Calder and 16½ from Edinburgh. It contains a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and a United Presbyterian chapel. Until within the last dozen years no trade of any importance was carried on; but about that time Mr. James Young, the patentee of the paraffin oil, having purchased several large properties in the parish, which contain several beds of rich bituminous shale, erected one of the largest works in Great Britain for the manufacture of oil. In consequence of these operations the parish has more than quadrupled its population within the above period, and a new village has sprung up towards the west. In the immediate vicinage, at a place called Castle Craig, are the traces of a Roman encampment. In 1871 the entire parish had a population of 7,865 persons, and the village 2,432 of that number.

POST OFFICE, MID-CALDER, James Hislop, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at twenty minutes before eight morning and seven evening, and are despatched at a quarter before six morning and five evening.

COLINTON.

BALERNO, CURRIE, HERMISTON, JUNIPER GREEN, KIRKNEWTON, AND SLATEFORD.

COLINTON, or Collington, is a village and parish, the latter lying at the base of the Pentland Hills, part of which it includes. The grounds rise beautifully from the vale of Corstorphine, and are finely cultivated, enclosed, and planted; the water of Leith passes through them, and its banks are here romantic and wooded. The church and manse of Colinton, standing in the midst of lovely scenery, are four miles from Edinburgh. Bonally Tower, the seat of the late Lord Cockburn, is in this parish, and is now the residence of Professor W. B. Hodgson, LL.B. The manufacture of paper is carried on extensively both here and at SLATEFORD, a village in this parish; and the district abounds with limestone and freestone. On the lands of Comiston, which lie to the east, are vestiges of a very extensive encampment, near which is a rude massive block of whinstone, called "Camusstone," said to indicate the burial place of some Danish commander. On these lands the fountain for the Edinburgh water-cistern was first erected. Logan-house Hill, in this parish, is a considerable eminence, rising upwards of 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. Population of the parish in 1871, 3,644.

The parish of CURRIE is bounded by Corstorphine and Ratho on the north, Colinton on the west, and the Pentland Hills skirt it on the south. Through the low grounds runs the water of Leith, and on its northern banks, six miles distant from Edinburgh, stands the village of CURRIE, through which the road to Lanark passes. The church is erected on a very commanding situation. The manufacture of paper and snuff prevails in this parish to some extent, the former particularly. On the estate of Malleny, beyond Currie, and rising above the banks of the Leith, is Lennox Tower, anciently the residence of the family of Lennox, as well as the occasional one of Mary Queen of Scots. At a short distance from it, on the opposite bank of the river, are the ruins of another ancient edifice, once the mansion of the Skenes of Currie-hill. The parish also contains the house of Baberton, which is remarkable as having been used as a hunting seat by royalty at two distant periods—first by James VI. of Scotland, previous to his accession to the English throne, and secondly by Charles X. of France, after his expulsion from his dominions in 1830. In 1871 the parish had a population of 2,360, and the village 329 of that number.

KIRKNEWTON, about nine miles from Edinburgh, is a small village and parish; the latter, which includes the abrogated parochial division of Calder Clere, is bounded on the south and west by Mid-Calder, on the east by Currie and Ratho, and on the north by Slate-ford. In the burial ground of the church, which is about half a mile distant from the village, lie interred the remains of the celebrated Dr. William Cullen, who was proprietor of the estate of Ormiston-hill, where he introduced, so early as the year 1758, an improved mode of culture. The river Almond, the water of Leith, and the Great Glasgow road intersect the parish, which abounds with excellent limestone, and contains some fine seats and pleasure grounds; one of these is called Meadowbank, once the residence of a late senator of the College of Justice, entitled Lord Meadowbank, who was one of the chief improvers of this neighbourhood. Population of the villag in 1871, 383.

BALERNO is a village in the parish of Currie, on the water of Leith, and situated about six miles from Edinburgh. There is a subscription school in the village, also mills for the manufacture of paper. HERMISTON is a village in the above parish. Population in 1871, 490.

JUNIPER GREEN is a small village in the parish of Colinton, and about three miles s.s.w. of Edinburgh. Population in 1871, 716.

CORSTORPHINE AND GOGAR.

CORSTORPHINE is a village and parish—the latter, which commences about two miles to the west of Edinburgh, presents, on the whole, a remarkably level surface—the only eminences being its cognominal hills, not exceeding in altitude 470 feet above the level of the sea. The southern and western sides of these hills are beautifully decorated with villas and well-enclosed plantations. The whole of the parish consists of rich arable land, producing crops of all kinds. The village of Corstorphine is three miles from Edinburgh, on the high road to Glasgow, in a very pleasant situation; that of the church is particularly romantic, and the building itself is an interesting one. This edifice (once collegiate) bears every appearance of having been a favourite establishment of the Foresters, a family of importance in this part of Mid-Lothian; all over the erection, to this day, their arms are blazoned in stone; and within ornamented niches, their effigies, in exquisite sculpture, are yet extant. These and other memorials of a past age are still entire, and, from their antiquity and variety, must be considered eminently worthy of a visit. A mineral spring, which had been neglected for nearly a century, was opened a few years since, and forms one of the chief attractions of the village; it also possesses a good subscription library of over 2,000 volumes, which proves of great benefit to the district. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,788 and of the village, 680.

GOGAR, formerly an independent parish, is a pleasant village in the parish of Corstorphine, situated on the banks of the Gogar burn, a tributary rivulet of the water of Leith. Here stood a chapel previous to the Reformation, the interesting ruins of which still remain a source of attraction to the antiquary and tourist. There is a station on the line of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, about three-quarters of a mile from the village.

POST OFFICE, CORSTORPHINE, David B. Geekie, Post Master—Letters arrive from Edinburgh at half-past seven and ten minutes before twelve morning and five evening, and are despatched thereto at five minutes past nine morning and at a quarter before five and five minutes past six evening.

DALKEITH,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF MILLER HILL, NEWTON, AND NEWBATTLE.

DALKEITH is a busy and populous market town, a burgh of barony, and a parish, six miles south from Edinburgh, and is a station on the Edinburgh, Dalkeith, and Hawick branch of the North British Railway, and on the railway to Peebles. It occupies an exceedingly delightful and dry situation, in a fertile district, diversified with hill, dale, and wood—with the North and South Esk flowing round the place. The town of Dalkeith is the largest in the county, except Edinburgh. It has been long celebrated for its weekly corn market, held every Thursday, and for a similar, although smaller, one for the sale of meal. Until a recent period the corn market was the largest in Scotland, but since the concentration of so many railways was effected in the capital, the Edinburgh grain market has greatly exceeded in magnitude every other Scottish market. Until the year 1854 the weekly market was held in the open street, but since then it has been held in a covered building near the east end of the town. This market place is one of the finest and most commodious structures of the kind in Scotland—the large hall being 172 feet long, 50 feet wide, and 45 high. It was erected at a cost of near £4,000. Prior to the formation of the Edinburgh and Hawick railway, the grain was all brought to the market in carts; now a considerable portion is brought by rail, though the number of carts ranged on the streets with grain is still very considerable. The progressive increase of the banking establishments in Dalkeith may be considered as a fair exponent of its business importance. The Commercial Bank opened an agency here in 1810; the National Bank in 1825; the Royal Bank in 1836; and the Edinburgh and Leith afterwards; the Edinburgh and Glasgow in 1839, but which merged in the Clydesdale in 1858. In 1839 a "National Security Savings Bank" was established, which is well supported, and has proved a great boon to the humble and frugal portion of the community. The district around Dalkeith abounds with coal, which is of an excellent quality, and is worked to a great and increasing extent. The extensive ironworks of Messrs. W. & R. Mushet and of Mr. Meiklejon afford employment to a large number of people. These, together with its markets, may be mentioned among the chief sources of the town's characteristic animation and prosperity. There are, however, various other agencies which operate in the same direction—such as Mr. Dawson's brush manufactory, several corn mills, brick fields, &c. It is proper to mention, too, that Dalkeith owes not a little to the activity and enterprise of its mercantile class, the amount of wholesale and retail business in grocery, ironmongery, and tobacco establishments being probably greater than in any other Scottish town of similar size. The town has very much improved this last thirty years, and is being gradually extended with excellent houses and cottages, enclosed in neat gardens and luxurious shrubberies. The municipal government is vested in a board of fifteen trustees, under an act of parliament; they have not, however, power to assess, and, in consequence, the sanitary and police regulations of the town are scarcely in keeping with its advanced social and commercial position. It is some comfort, however, that there are no local taxes; paving rates, lighting and water rate (except the case of private pipes) being wholly unknown. A sheriff's court is held in the Court Room, White Hart street, for cases under the Small Debt Act and Certain Debts Recovery Act, on the third Thursday of every month (September excepted), and a police court at the same place on the last Thursday of every month. There are eleven places of public worship—namely, two parish churches, one Episcopal, and one Roman Catholic Chapel, three United Presbyterian, one Free, one Independent, one Wesleyan, and one Evangelical Union, or Morrisonian, churches. There are several public schools and some good private ones. As indications of social and literary activity it may be mentioned that the Scientific Association, which was formed in 1835, continues with undiminished spirit and success. The great impulse to pauperism in Scotland by the Poor Law Amendment Act of 1845 led here, as elsewhere, to the erection of a workhouse, in order to furnish a test of poverty, and provide a suitable refuge for the destitute and infirm. The Dalkeith Union workhouse was the first of such houses in Scotland; it was opened in 1849 for the poor of four parishes, but there are now eleven parishes in combination. The cost of the building, which is capable of accommodating 120 inmates, was £4,058 18s. 10d., and this sum with the interest was paid off in ten yearly instalments. There are a number of villages in the parish, the inhabitants of which are engaged in the collieries, brickfields, or other public works, of the Duke of Buccleuch, by whom these villages were erected. The character of the dwellings provided for these, as well as all of the Duke's labourers, is of a very superior kind, and reflects much credit on his Grace's considerateness and liberality; indeed they may be regarded as model cottages, and they deserve study by those who seek to improve the poor man's dwelling. Dalkeith has been lighted with gas from almost the first introduction of that illuminating power. The company, which was formed in 1827, had a severe struggle for some years with expensive works and small returns, but ultimately all difficulties were overcome, and the town is now well supplied with cheap and excellent gas. In the neighbourhood are the mansions and grounds of Newbattle, Melville, and Dalhousie, the properties of the Marquis of Lothian, Viscount Melville, and the Marquis of Dalhousie; whilst, adjoining to the town, and on the southern bank of the North Esk, stands Dalkeith House, the principal seat of His Grace the Duke of Buccleuch. This building occupies the site of an ancient castle, which was long in the possession of the family of Douglas, and afterwards the frequent residence of the Regent Morton during the minority of James VI., when it was commonly and significantly called "the lion's den." The present edifice, which was built by the family of Scott about the close of the seventeenth century, consists of a body and two wings, with ornaments of the Corinthian order in front, and may be termed rather a good and substantial than an elegant house. The park contains about 800 Scottish, or 1,000 English acres (surrounded by a stone wall), adorned with much fine wood, and beautified by the windings of the two rivers Esk. The hall, the grand staircase, and the several suites of apartments within are spacious, elegantly finished, and enriched by a valuable collection of paintings. His late Majesty, George IV., on his visit to Scotland, sojourned at this mansion; and her present Majesty, Queen Victoria, has likewise honoured it with her presence. Dalkeith gives the title of Earl to the eldest son of the Duke of Buccleuch. Fairs are held annually on the first Thursday after Rutherglen (in May), for horses, &c., on the third Tuesday in October for cattle, &c., last Thursday in February for hiring, first Thursday in April, and second Thursday in October for hiring. Population of the parish in 1871, 7,667; and of the town of Dalkeith, 6,886.

NEWTON is a parish of some considerable extent, contiguous to Dalkeith on the south, having Lasswade and Liberton on the west and north, and Inveresk on the east. Coal is obtained abundantly within the parish. There is also an extensive manufactory for fire-bricks and sewage pipes, which, together with the coal mines, employ a large population. There is a handsome church belonging to the parish, and some useful schools—those for children of the collieries are well conducted, and have a very beneficial tendency. Population in 1871, 1,181.

MILLER HILL is the principal village in the parish, and is a station on the Edinburgh and Dalkeith branch of the North British Railway. Population in 1871, 300.

NEWBATTLE is a parish and village—the latter situated about a mile from Dalkeith. This parish likewise abounds with coal. The church is a plain substantial building, and adjoining to it is the minister's residence. Newbattle Abbey, the seat of the Marquis of Lothian, stands in the centre of an extensive domain several miles in circumference. The mansion is venerable and has historical associations of some interest. There is a well-attended parochial school, and at Newton Grange are handsome school premises erected by the munificence of the Marquis of Lothian, in which the colliers' children of the district are instructed. Population in 1871, 2,902.

GOREBRIDGE,

TEMPLE, HERIOT, STOW, BORTHWICK, FUSHIE BRIDGE, STOBBS MILL, AND CARRINGTON.

GOREBRIDGE is a populous village in the parish of Temple, about 10 miles S.E. from Edinburgh, and 4 miles S. from Dalkeith. It is a station on the Edinburgh and Hawick branch of the North British Railway. Sixty years ago there were only a few houses here; now, through the opening of extensive coalfields adjacent, and also the railway, it has become a place of importance. The places of worship in the village are the Free and an United Presbyterian church. The parish church is at the village of Temple, about three miles distant; the village is well lighted with gas, supplied by a public company. The first works for the manufacture of gunpowder in Scotland were established here. Population in 1871, 966.

TEMPLE parish, near the head of the South Esk, is bounded on the east by Borthwick, on the south by Heriot, on the west by Edleston and Pennycuick, and on the north by Carrington. The village, which is about ten miles from Edinburgh, is situated on the rising ground on the banks of the Gladhouse water, which falls into the South Esk a short way below. It has an old Gothic church (now in ruins), founded by King David I. for Templars; the new church (also Gothic) was built in 1880. The parish, which is chiefly of a hilly nature, and contains much moorish and pasture land, had in 1871 a population of 1,536.

HERIOT parish is ten miles in length, six in breadth, and situate sixteen miles from the capital; and within the parish is a station on the Edinburgh and Hawick branch of the North British Railway. The surface of the land in this district is generally uneven; on the banks of the Gala and Heriot waters it is fertile. These two streams take their rise in the Muirfoot hills here, and afford fine sport to the angler. There are the remains of several ancient fortifications, most of them of a circular form, to be seen in this neighbourhood. The name of the parish imports the fine paid to the lord of the manor by a tenant. A fair is held at the head of Gala water on the first Friday after Whit-Sunday for sheep and lambs. The parish encloses an area of 15,013 acres, with a population in 1871 of 414.

STOW is an extensive parish in the southern extremity of the county. It is nearly sixteen miles long and eight broad, and partly in Selkirkshire. At the village of Stow, which is a station on the Edinburgh and Hawick branch of the North British Railway, are three churches, which belong respectively to the Establishment, the Free Church, and the United Presbyterians. There is an extensive woollen manufactory, also one for the manufacture of tweeds. In the village is a very handsome town-hall, part of which is devoted to a literary institute and library, and a public room for lectures. The village is well lighted with gas, supplied by a public company. A hiring-fair for servants is held in the village on the second Tuesday of March, and the Fast days on second Wednesdays of July and December. Acreage, 36,832; population in 1871, 2,306.

BORTHWICK parish lies about twelve miles from Edinburgh, on the Carlisle road. Near the church, which is beautifully situated on an eminence, are the ruins of Borthwick Castle, erected in the year 1436, by Lord Borthwick. These interesting remains, which are only two miles west from Crichton, are eminently worthy of being visited by the tourist. The parish has been the birth-place of several highly distinguished men, among whom may be enumerated Principal Robertson and Dundas of Arniston. Acreage of the parish, 9,806. Population in 1871, 4,720.

FUSHIE BRIDGE is a neat village, in the parish of and about one mile from Borthwick, and five from Dalkeith. At this village is a station on the line above mentioned. About a mile to the north is the village of STOBBS MILL, lying partly in Borthwick parish and partly in that of Temple.

CARRINGTON.—This small parish lies in the southern part of the county, on the descending braes which, at their summit, divide the district from the wilds of Peebles-shire. The village is pleasantly situated on elevated land, nine and a half miles south-east from Edinburgh, and consists of but a few houses and the kirk. Though not unfavourable to the growth of corn, the soil is more particularly adapted to that of the potato and green crops; coal is wrought in abundance, and there is also an indication of ironstone. Prior to the Reformation this parish had the valuable peculiarity of being a rectory independent of any monastery. The parish embraces an area of 4,403 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 712.

LASSWADE,

BONNYRIGG, LIBERTON, GILMERTON, GREENEND, LOANHEAD, ROSLIN, AND ROSEWELL.

LASSWADE is a small neat village and parish—the former six miles south from Edinburgh, and two from Dalkeith, delightfully situated on both sides of the North Esk, which is here crossed by a good stone bridge. With its handsome modern church, crowning the height on the north bank of the stream, and its modest rural cottages below, embossomed in luxuriant gardens and umbrageous trees, it may be esteemed one of the prettiest and most picturesque villages in Scotland. Within the last thirty years this place has been greatly improved by the erection of manysubstantial dwellings, and the opening of several manufacturing establishments; among the latter are four paper mills, and a carpet manufactory. The Polton Mills, belonging to Messrs. Annandale and Son, are extensive works for making both writing and printing papers, of various qualities. The North Esk runs through the whole length of the parish, and on its banks are presented a continuous succession of charming seats, in the most inviting situations, such as Melville castle,Mavisbank, and Hawthornden—the latter remarkable for having belonged to Drummond, the poet and historian, and for the caves under it. These caves are three in number; the largest is twelve feet wide at the entrance, gradually tapering inwards; the height is six feet, and the length ninety; above there is a tunnel cut, for the admission of light and the circulation of air; in a recess there is a well, several fathoms deep. These caves are said to have afforded shelter to the Scots in turbulent times. At a little distance stand the ruins of Roslin Castle; and adjacent is Roslin chapel, one of the most entire and beautiful pieces of Gothic architecture now remaining in Scotland. In the cemetery of Lasswade church are interred the remains of Drummond, the poet before mentioned; and an aisle of the old structure is appropriated as a burial vault for the noble family of Melville, and here lie the remains of the first viscount of that title, whose prominent situation during the ministry of Mr. Pitt will still be recollected. The whole parish abounds in coal mines, which have been wrought for more than two centuries. The parish, which embraces an area of 10,675 acres in 1871, had a population of 7,098, of that number the village contained 944.

ROSEWELL is a rising village in the parish of Lasswade, situated about four miles from Dalkeith, and two from Bonnyrigg. There is a neat church of the establishment, and a public school in the village. The Peebles Railway passes the village about half a mile distant, there being a station at Hawthornden. In the neighbourhood there is an abundance of coal, and the manufacture of fire-clay goods and mineral oils is carried on to a considerable extent. Population in 1871, 790.

The parish of LIBERTON includes three villages of its name—UPPER (or OVER) LIBERTON, LIBERTON KIRK, and NETHER LIBERTON, with GILMERTON and GREENEND—all of great antiquity, but none of them now of extensive importance. The kirk town is about three miles from the capital, and the like distance from Dalkeith and Lasswade. Gilmerton the most considerable village in the parish, is situated about midway between Edinburgh and Dalkeith. There is a neat church or chapel of ease to Liberton in the village, which is chiefly occupied by colliers. Greenend village is about four miles from Lasswade, on the road to Edinburgh. The old church of Liberton, which was of Gothic architecture, survived till a recent date, when it was removed to make way for the present handsome semi-Gothic structure, whose square turrets and pinnacles can be seen at a great distance; an excellent manse is adjacent, and the village is contiguous. The parish, which lies at the base of the Pentland hills, is exceedingly populous; and its mines of coal and its lime works are most extensive and valuable. The celebrated cave, dug by George Paterson, a blacksmith, out of the solid rock, was finished in 1724, after five years' hard labour. In this cave are several apartments with beds, a table with a large punchbowl, all formed from the same unmalleable material; there are also a smith's forge, a well, and a washing house. Here Paterson lived several years, and here he died about 1737. Craigmillar castle, sometime a favourite residence of Queen Mary, stands on a rising ground of moderate elevation, and commands a beautiful and extensive prospect over the surrounding country. Liberton parish embraces an area of 6,617 acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 3,791. Population of Gilmerton, 1,062.

BONNYRIGG is a large and rising village in the parish of Cockpen, situated six miles south from Edinburgh and two from Dalkeith. There is a handsome Free church, two large and commodious schools, with an attendance of about 250 pupils in each; a Town Hall, capable of holding about six hundred persons, and a bowling green, which is largely frequented by the inhabitants and others. There is also a branch of the Bank of Scotland, and two Railway Stations, viz:—Broomieknowe on the Esk Valley Railway, and Bonnyrigg on the Peebles Railway. Carpet weaving is carried on to a very considerable extent, about 400 hands being employed in the manufacture of this very useful article; and in the immediate neighbourhood there are several coal mines, and two brick manufactories employing a large number of hands. BROOMIEKNOWE, which is a part of the village being in close proximity thereto, is resorted to by a large number of summer visitors. The Esk Valley which is admired by all who visit it can be seen from here to great advantage, and the view is open for miles around. Population in 1871, 1,857.

LOANHEAD is a neat and populous village in the parish of Lasswade, one mile from that town, rather more than two from Liberton, and five south-east from Edinburgh. It contains many respectable houses, and in the neighbourhood several families of distinction are resident. A considerable proportion of the population is employed in the collieries, and some in the neighbouring paper mills. This village has the advantage of being well supplied with water, which is conveyed to the houses by pipes. Population in 1871, 1,759.

ROSLIN is a small village and parish, the latter separated from Lasswade some years ago, and erected into a distinct parish of itself. The village is reached by a cross road leading southward from the line betwixt Peebles and Edinburgh, distant from Edinburgh seven miles, from Lasswade two and a half, and from Loanhead two miles. It is much visited by tourists and parties from the metropolis, both on account of the beauties of the scenery and of the ruins of Roslin castle and its chapel. These stand south from the village, the former on the bank of the North Esk. The chapel is one of the most perfect specimens of Gothic architecture that time has spared in this part of the kingdom. These interesting relics, in connection with the loveliness of the district by which they are surrounded, form an attraction that invariably delights the visitor of cultivated taste and the admirer of the picturesque and beautiful. Agriculture is the prevailing occupation of the inhabitants of the parish; but there are the Roslin Gunpowder Mills and the extensive carpet works of Messrs. Henry Widnell & Co. which produce some beautiful specimens of weaving both in carpets, rugs, and table covers, and which furnish employment to other industrious hands. Population of the village in 1871, 511.

MUSSELBURGH AND FISHERROW,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF INVERESK, MONKTON-HALL, BRUNSTANE, AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

MUSSELBURGH, a town of great antiquity, a burgh of regality, and now represented in parliament, is in the parish of Inveresk; six miles E. from Edinburgh; situated on the shore of the Firth of Forth, at the mouth of the Esk. It occupies a low site on a flat expanse, between the eminence on which the church of Inveresk is placed and the sea, on the east bank of the river Esk, the suburb of Fisherrow lying on the opposite side. The Esk at its junction with the Forth is of considerable breadth, but is very shallow, and meanders over a gravelly bed; in dry seasons containing little water, but in rainy seasons rising with irresistible force from the sources and tributaries in the interior districts, and on such occasions the appearance of the river is grand. Musselburgh derived its name from the mussel banks near the shore. The place is noticed in the seventh century as the Eskemuthe of the Northumbrian Saxons, which may probably refer merely to the river—the name Esk signifying water, and invcr the mouth. For centuries afterwards Musselburgh was a paltry village, though it gave its name to the adjacent district, which in old charters is designated Musselburghshire, and a locality on the river below the parish church is still known as the Shire Haugh. After the erection of the priory of Dunfermline into a Benedictine Abbey by David I., the town until the Reformation was a burgh of regality belonging to that abbey. James VI. granted the superiority to Lord Chancellor Maitland, of Thirlestane, with whose descendants, the Earls of Lauderdale, it remained till 1709, when it was purchased by Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch, and the Duke of Buccleuch is now lord of the regality. It is said that Musselburgh received its first charter from Donald, Earl of Marr, in 1340, as an acknowledgement for the attention shown by the inhabitants to his cousin, the celebrated Randolph, Earl of Murray, Regent of Scotland, the nephew of King Robert Bruce. The Regent died at Musselburgh in 1332, in a homely tenement, then the best in the place, which stood on the south side of the High street, near the enclosures of Pinkie House, and now represented by a plain house of two stories, used as a school and masonic lodge. Marr, who succeeded Earl Randolph in the regency, conferred on Musselburgh the appellation of the "honest town," which it still retains, and the motto is Honestas. But the most ancient charter now extant is that bearing date the 11th of December, 1562, in the reign of Queen Mary, which was obtained from Robert Pitcairn, commendator of Dunfermline, and was confirmed by subsequent charters and Acts of Parliament—more particularly by one from John, Duke of Lauderdale, dated 1670, in which all the ancient rights and privileges are acknowledged. In the year 1632 it was erected into a royal burgh by charter under the great seal, which excited the jealousy of the magistrates of Edinburgh, who contrived to obtain a reduction of the charter that year. Musselburgh, which municipally includes Fisherrow, is governed by a provost, three bailies, a treasurer, and seven councillors, elected according to the provisions of the Burgh Reform Act. The burgh unites with Leith, Newhaven and Portobello in returning one member to parliament. The magistrates are empowered to hold a court of record, and to grant enfeoffments. Their jurisdiction extends two and a half miles along the shore, from the Magdalen bridge rivulet on the west to Ravenshaugh streamlet on the east, which at that locality is the boundary with Haddingtonshire, and in the centre of which is the burgh and its suburb of Fisherrow; but the magistrates possess no jurisdiction over Inveresk village, which is included within the county. The town consists of two streets in the direction nearly east and west; the main, or High street, extends from the bridge over the Esk on the west to the beautiful enclosures of Loretto and Pinkie on the east, and is on the great road from Edinburgh to Berwick and London. Parallel to the High street is the Mill hill, which leads from the Esk to the London road, at the entrance to the Links and Loretto grounds. A street known as Newbigging extends south from nearly the centre of the town opposite the cross, and leads directly to Inveresk, a quarter of a mile inland. The town contains a few minor streets and alleys. The only public edifice is the Town Hall, occupying an angle in the High-street, a substantial and commodious edifice, including an assembly room and a council room. Connected with the Town Hall is the gaol, now used since the passing of the Prison Act as a temporary place of confinement for petty offenders. This prison is said to have been erected about 1590 from the materials of the ruinous chapel of Loretto, for which act of sacrilege the burgesses, it is alleged, were annually excommunicated at Rome till the end of the eighteenth century, when the progress of the French revolution finished such harmless denunciations. The gaol displays a diminutive and homely elated spire, the clock-dial of which has the date 1496, and the machinery is said to have been sent from Holland. The cross, a pillar resting upon a pedestal, surmounted by the Unicorn sitting with a shield, on which is the town's arms, is in front of the Town Hall. Behind the cross is the only inn in the town, called the "Musselburgh Arms." The town is lighted with gas by a company established in 1831, who have erected works on the Links at the mouth of the Esk. The Esk is crossed by two stone, and the same number of wooden bridges. The new bridge, an elegant structure erected in 1806-7 from a design by Rennie, consists of five elliptical arches, and the old bridge, a clumsy though venerable edifice of three arches; the roadway, high and narrow, and only used by foot passengers is a short distance further up the river. This bridge, erroneously supposed to be of Roman origin, was built by Lady Jane Hepburn, wife of the then Lord Seton, an ancestress of the Earls of Winton, and grand-aunt of the notorious Earl of Bothwell, associated with the history of the unhappy Queen Mary. The Scottish army crossed this bridge after the fatal battle of Pinkie, in September, 1547, when Lord Graham, eldest son of the Earl of Montrose, and others were killed on it by cannon shot from the English fleet at the mouth of the Esk. The lower wooden bridge is maintained for pedestrians to or from Fisherrow and Musselburgh; and the upper wooden bridge, above the old bridge, is the exclusive property of the North British Railway Company, leading directly to the Musselburgh branch station of the Hawick branch of that line, which diverges at Niddrie, upwards of a mile inland. The station house of this branch, which is the terminus, is on the Musselburgh side of the Esk, close to the old bridge, and is a very handsome and commodious edifice. The manufactures and most prominent branches of business in Musselburgh and Fisherrow are the making of sail cloth, herring nets, starch, oil cake and earthenware; tanning and brewing; and chemical works. The patent herring net manufacture was introduced about the period above mentioned by Mr. James Paterson, who invented looms of an ingenious and novel construction, from which superior and cheaper articles are produced than those formerly in use. Branches of the Royal Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland and the National Bank of Scotland are established in Musselburgh, and there are several benevolent and religious societies. Inland, Musselburgh is surrounded by a rich agricultural country, and by a number of coal mines, in active operation. The places of worship in Inveresk parish, including Musselburgh and Fisherrow, &c., are detailed in a list appended to the Directory of the town. The parish church occupies the right of the hill of Inveresk, and is a large square edifice without any architectural pretensions; it is a conspicuous object in all directions, and its lofty and elegant spire is a landmark in the navigation of the Firth of Forth. In the church-yard are the remains of many naval and military heroes, and here also is the grave of David Macbeth Moir, the celebrated poet "Delta," to whose memory a handsome monument is erected at the top of High-street. Musselburgh has long been distinguished for its schools—among which the most conspicuous is the Burgh Grammar School; there is an English burgh school in Musselburgh, and another in Fisherrow; these schools are now under the control of the School Board. There are two or three private academies of high reputation. The spacious common known as the "Links," extending east from the town along the shore from the Esk on the west, has long been in deserved repute as golfing ground, and a silver cup is contested for annually by the members of a club established in 1670. These downs are also the resort, for one day in the year of the "Royal Company of Archers;" since 1817 the Edinburgh horse-races have been run here in the autumn, and the races of the Caledonian Hunt occur every third year. Cromwell quartered his infantry on Musselburgh Links in 1650, before the battle of Dunbar, and his tent was fixed opposite the villa of Linkfield. No weekly, monthly or annual markets are held in Musselburgh, and a corn market was once attempted, which was unsuccessful. No fairs are held, with the exception of an annual gathering on the second Tuesday and Wednesday of August, which is solely the resort of idlers and juveniles. According to the census returns for 1871 the parliamentary burgh of Musselburgh contained a population of 7,513.

FISHERROW, which consists of four parallel streets, is connected with Musselburgh by the stone and wooden bridges previously noticed, and both are municipally, politically, and locally one town or burgh, under the sole jurisdiction of the provost, magistrates, and town council of Musselburgh. The small harbour is at the west end of Fisherrow, and is under the control of commissioners. A large sum has been expended in erecting and improving the piers, but the harbour is tidal, the access shallow, and never can admit vessels of any considerable tonnage. The custom-house, connected with that of Leith, is near the harbour. A proportion of the inhabitants of Fisherrow are fishermen, and the produce of their industry is conveyed to the Edinburgh market by their wives and daughters. These women are a peculiar class, distinguished from the rest of the community by their dress, habits, and manners, and partake little in the general improvement. Population in 1871, 2,689.

The parish of INVERESK is situated at the north-eastern extremity of the county, and possesses a soil peculiarly adapted for agricultural productions. The situation of Inveresk village is so pleasant that it has been often designated "the Montpelier of Scotland." Delightful views are obtained of the Firth of Forth and the coast of Fife on the north, and on the south the fine vale of the Esk to the Pentland Hills. This village, which chiefly consists of elegant and substantial mansions and villas with charming gardens, was represented by two shepherds' huts when the battle of Pinkie was fought in 1547. The principal Roman station in this quarter was the hill of Inveresk on the site of the parish church, and the Prætorium was in the adjoining grounds of Inveresk House. The old bridge, already mentioned as built by Lady Seton, is in all probability on the site of a Roman structure, as it is in a direct line with the site of the Prætorium. Pinkie House, with the exception of the tower, which is of the reign of James III. or James IV. is at the east end of the High street of Musselburgh, amid fine pleasure grounds and stately old trees. This edifice, which is on the property of the abbots of Dunfermline, was erected by Alexander Seton, first Earl of Dunfermline, a brother of the first Earl of Winton, and consists of two sides of an unfinished quadrangle. The mansion is admired as a fine specimen of the Scottish manor of the reign of James VI. The battlefield of Pinkie, in 1547, most disastrous to the Scottish army, is chiefly within the enclosures of Pinkie House. Overlooking Pinkie, upwards of a mile inland, is Carberry hill, celebrated for the surrender of Queen Mary to the confederated nobility in 1567, and where she finally parted with Bothwell. Near, is the fine mansion of Carberry House. Numerous villas adorn the vicinity of Musselburgh. New Hailes, a fine mansion, half a mile south-west from Fisherrow, was the seat of Sir David Dalrymple, Bart., Lord Hailes, distinguished as the great restorer of Scottish history and antiquities. He died in this mansion, in which his valuable library is carefully preserved. In this parish are found limestone, freestone, and coal, the latter particularly in abundance. The entire parish of Inveresk embraces an area of 5,155 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 10,071.

MONKTON-HALL, a small village in the parish of Inveresk, is of some little note in the annals of Scottish warfare, as on the eve of the battle of Pinkie the army lay around this village; and here a sort of Parliament was held by Governor Arran, at which an act was passed providing that the nearest heir of any churchman who should fall in the ensuing battle should have the gift of his benefice.

BRUNSTANE, or Brunstane Mills, is a hamlet situated on the road from Musselburgh to Edinburgh, distant from the latter about four miles. Brunstane Castle, or House, which stands on high ground to the west, was formerly the patrimonial residence of the family of Creichton, who took an active share in the Reformation. In Brunstane and Ormiston Castles John Knox and other Reformers always found a welcome and a shelter. At a later period of Scottish history, Brunstane was occupied by a very different person—namely, John, Duke of Lauderdale; it is now tenanted by a private family.

POST OFFICE, MUSSELBURGH, John Leitch, Post Master.—Letters from Edinburgh arrive at seven and a quarter to nine morning, two afternoon, and seven evening, and are despatched at ten morning, twenty minutes past twelve noon, four afternoon, and five minutes past seven evening, and half-past nine night.

PATH-HEAD,

CRANSTON, EDGEHEAD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PATH-HEAD, or Path-head Ford, is a considerable village in the parish of Crichton, 11 miles S.S.E. from Edinburgh, five from Dalkeith, and 3 from Fala, situated on both sides of the Lauder, the great south county, and London road, passing through it. The village is about two miles from that of Crichton (described along with Heriot, which see). The principal street is broad and straight, and the houses, which are mostly of one storey, are well built. The surrounding country abounds with beautiful scenery, and several seats of the gentry contribute in ornamenting the district. Population of the village in 1871, 667.

The parish of CRANSTON, or Cranstoun, is intersected by the river Tyne, having Dalkeith and Newbattle on the north and west, and Crichton on the south, extending five miles in length by three in breadth, but very narrow in the middle. The land is high and undulating, but is well cultivated and enclosed, and embellished with numerous and delightful plantations. A handsome church, of white freestone, in the Gothic style of architecture, is within the parish, on the road to Dalkeith. Within the parish is Oxenford Castle and Preston Hall—the former the seat of the Earl of Stair. The parish comprises the colliery village of EDGE-HEAD; the Oxenford colliery at this place producing coal of a very excellent quality. COUSLAND and PRESTON are two other villages in Cranston parish, but they contain nothing worthy of note. Acreage 5,100. In 1871 Cranston had a population of 1,036.

POST OFFICE, PATH-HEAD FORD, James Walker, Post Master—Letters from all parts arrive (from Dalkeith) at nine and half past eleven morning, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes past one afternoon and at half-past six evening.
Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

 Letters for Path-head should be addressed "PATH-HEAD FORD."

PENNYCUICK,

GLENCROSS, AUCHINDINNY, GREENLAW, AND MILTON BRIDGE.

PENNYCUICK, or, as it is now commonly written, PENICUIK, is a parish. The village, a thriving one, and well built, is seated on high land, overhanging the North bank of the North Esk river, and on the road from Edinburgh to Peebles, about 9 miles s.w. from the former, 13 N. from the latter, and 9 s.s.w. from Dalkeith. The name Pennycuick is of Celtic etymology, and signifies "the hill of the cuckoo," or, as other authorities contend, the cry or song of that bird. Below the village, on the margin of the river, are the paper mills of Messrs. Cowan & Sons, Valleyfield; they are the largest in the part of the country, and manufacture both writing and printing papers, and furnish constant employment to about 600 hands. There is another paper mill in the parish, which likewise employs many persons. During the war, the spot on which these mills are now at work was covered with barracks for the reception of French prisoners, in memory of whom a monument was erected in the year 1860. The parish extends from eleven to twelve miles in length, and six in breadth, and is watered by the river Esk, which runs through its whole extent. Towards the northern border the parish includes a considerable part of the Pentland Hills, on which are pastured numerous flocks of sheep; the southern parts are more level, and the soil is various. Pennycuick House is an elegant edifice, built about 1761 by Sir James Clerk, and is now the residence of Sir George Clerk, Bart. There is a good collection of paintings in it, and Ossian's Hall, the work of Runciman, is much admired. Sir James also collected a considerable number of Roman antiquities. To the south of the house is an obelisk, erected to the memory of Allan Ramsay, the poet, who frequently resided here. There is abundance of coal and limestone, the latter occasionally so hard as to admit of a fine polish, and in which many petrifactions are found. Whinstone and freestone are also plentiful, and in Carlope Hill have been discovered specimens of lead and iron ore. There are several chalybeate and petrifying springs in this quarter; and on the banks of the North Esk, near Spittal Hill, there is a well, the waters of which have a bitter taste, and are drunk by the country people as a cure for bowel complaints. The ruins of some old castles, and several vestiges of encampments are pointed out in this district. MILTON BRIDGE is a small hamlet near Pennycuick. The parish of Pennycuick encloses an area of 18,880 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 3,765.

GLENCROSS is a small parish in the county of Mid Lothian, containing about three square miles, and at a distance of six south from Edinburgh. The road to Dumfries, Biggar, Moffat, Peebles, and Pennycuick passes through it. In the vale of Glencross, on the north side of the Esk, are the ruins of a chapel, dedicated to Saint Catherine. The church is built on an eminence surrounded by trees. Near Woodhouselee is the scene of that favourite pastoral, "The Gentle Shepherd," written by Allan Ramsay: a romantic fall of the water is still called "Habbies How." At GREENLAW, in this parish, is a large prison or penitentiary for military offenders. Acreage of the parish, 4,276; population in 1871, 1,153.

AUCHINDINNY is a village in the parish of Glencross, 7½ miles s. from Edinburgh, on the road to Peebles, situated in a romantic dell, through which flows the North Esk. This place has been long known for the manufacture of paper, and it has been said that one of the first mills established in Scotland was erected in this locality and there is one now in operation contiguous to the village. The manufacture of paper was introduced into North Britain about one hundred and seventy years ago; previously all stationery articles were imported regularly from Holland.

PORTOBELLO,

DUDDINGSTON, JOPPA, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PORTOBELLO, a parliamentary burgh and a fashionable watering-place, is situated on a plain on the south side of the Frith of Forth, and in the parish of Duddingston, with a small port in the parish of South Leith. It is three miles from Edinburgh by the turnpike road. The North British Railway to Berwick and Carlisle possess a station near the centre of the town and another at Joppa, thus giving ready access to all parts of the kingdom. Few towns have risen more rapidly in importance. About a century ago the ground which it occupies was an unproductive waste along the shore, overspread with whins and bents, affording ready shelter to the smuggler and to lawless characters from the metropolis. There was then only one thatched hut of two apartments, "a but and a ben," which stood until the year 1862, when it was pulled down. The fanciful idea is quite common and generally accepted, that this hut was built by a sailor who had served under Admiral Vernon at the storming of Puertobello, in the Isthmus of Panama, in the year 1739, and who had misanthropically secluded himself in what must then have been a dreary region. The fact we believe, however, is that it was put up by the farmer of the adjoining lands as an outstabling in connection with his farm, and, being finished about the time the news arrived of the taking of Puertobello, it was named "Portobello" after it. For a long time it was the only habitation, as it was not till about the year 1760 that the locality attracted the attention of the citizens of Edinburgh, who then began to erect houses in the vicinity. The town now consists of a main or High street, a mile and a quarter long, and about fifty streets, terraces, squares, and crescents of handsome houses and elegant villas, which, standing at some distance back from the streets, and having gardens in front, give the town a light and airy appearance. The municipal authorities are a provost, two bailies, and six councillors. The burgh contributes, along with Leith and Musselburgh, in returning a member to parliament; the constituency numbers 388. There are a police, cleaning and lighting establishment, and a fire brigade; water of excellent quality is supplied in abundance at high pressure, and the houses and streets are lighted with gas. The magistrates and council have expended a large sum of money on the drainage of the town, which is thorough and complete. They also constructed a broad marine promenade, a mile in length, along the sea beach, in the middle of which stands the Prince of Wales' Fountain, a very handsome ornamental drinking fountain. It has also an elegant iron pier, 1,250 feet long, with seats capable of accommodating 2,000 persons, and a spacious saloon for the use of visitors. The beach is a noble expanse of pure smooth sand, affording at all times the greatest facility and safety to bathers, for whose accommodation there are bathing coaches and a commodious suite of warm salt-water baths. The residential accommodation is of all kinds, several hotels, houses of various sizes and degrees of elegance, and large villas suitable for first-class families. The places of worship are in connection with the Church of Scotland, the Free Church, United Presbyterian, Episcopal, Congregational, and Roman Catholic; and there are schools in connection with some of the churches. There are three banks, branches respectively of the Royal, the National, and the Clydesdale Banking Companies. A considerable trade is done in the manufacture of paper, bottles, pottery, earthenware, bricks, and tiles; and at JOPPA there are salt works. The scenery is varied and extensive; on one side the noble estuary of the Firth, with the island of Inchkeith, the hills of Fife and Kinross, the bay of Alderlady, the fertile lands of East Lothian, Troplainlaw, North Berwicklaw, and in the distance the Bass Rock, while all around the coasts are studded with numerous picturesque towns and villages; and on the other side are Arthur's Seat, Craigmillar Castle, and the Pentland Hills. The air is pure and invigorating, and the locality very healthy. These immediate local advantages, together with its proximity to the metropolis, to which there is constant communication by railway and tramway cars, and the easy access to all parts of the kingdom, combine to render Portobello a most desirable place either for permanent residence or temporary retirement. In 1871 Portobello had a population of 5,481.

DUDDINGSTON parish is bounded by the parish of Canongate, a part of the metropolis, on the west; South Leith on the North, the sea and part of Inveresk on the east, and Liberton on the south. The parish derives its name from the settlement here of one Dodin, during the reigns of David I. and Malcolm IV.; this is ascertained by a charter of William de Venterponte, to the canons of Holyrood, of which Hugo Filius Dodini de Dodinestun, appears to have been a witness. From a very early period it seems that there have been two villages called EASTER AND WESTER DUDDINGSTON; the former continues in its original extent, though much improved. Wester Duddingston is charmingly situated near the base of Arthur's Seat, and at the east end of the loch which bears its name. Round Arthur's Seat is a noble drive, known as the Queen's Drive. The church which is Norman, and of very great antiquity, occupies a small eminence rising from the verge of the water. Though modernised externally, its interior ornaments and arches appear to be as old as the days of Dodin. The village consists of only a few detached cottages, of humble character, and several neat and tasteful villas, the country residences of families. Duddingston Loch is a beautiful sheet of water, about the third of a mile in length, and not more than half a mile from the southern outskirts of Edinburgh. There is an excellent road between Duddingston and Portobello. The parish encloses an area of 1,731 acres, and contained in 1871 a population of 6,369 persons.

JOPPA, before mentioned, intimately connected with, and now a part of, the burgh of Portobello, is of modern growth. Some years since a freestone quarry was opened in the neighbourhood, and subsequently a mineral spring was discovered; the latter attracts some of the visitors to Portobello, who fancy the waters may be beneficial to them. A number of neat villas have been built near the road, some of which are neatly furnished for the accommodation of visitors. Population in 1871, 313.

RATHO,

KIRKLISTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

RATHO is a small village situated about eight miles w. by s. from Edinburgh, nearly in the centre of its parish, and contiguous to the Edinbugh and Glasgow Railway and the Union Canal, by which communication it enjoys a ready access to the capital and intermediate district. The parish, which is about four miles long and three broad, lies in the middle between the Pentland hills and the Frith of Forth. The east part is flat and fertile, but the ground rises gradually towards the west. Dalmahoy, the principal residence of the Earl o fMorton, and Hatton, formerly belonging to the family of Lauderdale, both beautiful and elegant seats, are in this parish; these with the plantations of Addison, give a rich and pleasant aspect to the country. Agriculture is carried on with spirit and success, of which Mr. M'Knight first set the example. The Hills of Dalmahoy and Kaimes abound with freestone. The parish church is rather a handsome building, and the public school is spacious and well attended. The parish of Ratho comprises an area of 6,147 acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 1,744; of this number the village had 717.

KIRKLISTON is partly in Mid-Lothian, and extends into Linlithgowshire; the village is eight miles from Edinburgh, situated on the left bank of the Almond, on the road to Falkirk. This place was anciently called Temple-Liston, from the circumstance of the Knights Templars having formerly had an establishment here. The village is well built; it is, however, of but limited trade; distilling and grinding corn are the principal branches. The church is neat, and its situation remarkably pleasant. The surface of the country is agreeably varied by rising ground—is rich, well cultivated, and produces excellent crops. Here Lord Stair first introduced the culture of cabbage in the open fields. Within a field on the east side of the Almond stands a remarkable monumont of antiquity, called the Catstane, erected at a period too remote for conjecture. It stands four feet and a half above the ground, and is about eleven feet and a half in circumference; its surface bears a delapidated inscription, which has puzzled the skill of antiquaries to decipher. About a mile from Kirkliston is Newliston House, principally erected and finished by John Earl of Stair, and now the elegant seat of Thomas Alexander Hog, Esq. The house is handsome and modern; the plantations extensive and tastefully disposed. Area of the parish 9,541 acres; population in 1871, 2,187.

ABERDEENSHIRE.

THIS important and extensive county is situated in the north-east part of Scotland, and is bounded on the north and east by the North Sea; on the south by the counties of Kincardine, Forfar, and Perth; and on the west by Inverness-shire and Banffshire. In form it approaches to that of an oval, the length of which, from north-east to south-west, is about eighty five miles, and its extreme breadth about forty. It is estimated to comprise 1,970 square miles, or 1,260,625 acres. There is a characteristic difference to be observed in the inhabitants of Aberdeenshire from those of any other county in Scotland; they are in general regarded as an active, vigorous, and enterprising race; and when they emigrate they seldom fail of success. The dialect of the inhabitants, too, is peculiar from those of the south of Scotland; and to a stranger's ear appears to be attended with a quick, sharp, and rather angry accent. On the sea coasts they have a distinct difference of physiognomical appearance from other inhabitants of Scotland; and attest by this, as well as by their speech, that they are descended from a race which originally came from the northern regions of Europe, and fixed themselves in this part of Scotland.

SOIL, SURFACE, &C.—Towards the sea the county is fertile, and comparatively level; but a great proportion of the county lies amidst the wilderness of the central highlands. The county is popularly divided into five districts, namely,—Marr, the southernmost, comprehends all south of the river Dee, from the sea to the east end of the hill of Benochie; Garioch lies north of the Don, bounded by a ridge of hills beginning near the royal burgh of Kintore; Strathbogie lies to the north-west of Garioch, and south-east of the upper part of Marr; Formarten, east of Garioch, and bounded on the south by the river Don, and on the north and east by the Ythan and the North sea; Buchan, extending from the Ythan to the Deveron. These five districts are sub-divided into lesser districts or divisions, whose names are generally descriptive of their appearance and situation. The district of Marr, on the confines of the shires of Banff, Inverness, Perth, and Angus may be considered as the centre of Scotland, being at the greatest distance from the sea in every direction. The appearance of the upper part of this district is wild, rugged and mountainous. Towards the east and north-east the county becomes more level, but is in many places moorish and barren; but the woods, mostly fir, are extensive, producing fine timber. The rivers Don and Dee have both their sources in this quarter. Balmoral, the Highland residence of Her Majesty the Queen, and Abergeldie, the seat of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, are in this district. From the top of Craigendarroch, there is, perhaps, one of the most grand and picturesque views in Scotland. The district of Buchan is not so hilly, lying mostly on the east and north coast, but being almost destitute of wood its appearance is bleak and naked; from the quantities, however, of large timber found in many mosses, no doubt can exist of its having been once well wooded. Anciently this extensive domain was the property of the Earls of Buchan, on whose attainder in 1320 King Robert Bruce divided the land amongst his adherents. Subsequently the title was revived in the Erskine family, but without a restoration of the lands, and the present Earl has but little property in this quarter. The districts of Strathbogie, Garioch and Formarten are generally well cultivated. At the termination of a deep glen in Strathdee is the pass or craigs of Bollitar, which forms the eastern entrance into the Grampian mountains. To the south of Peterhead are the remarkable breakers on the coast, called the Bullers of Buchan. They represent a large oval cavity, in depth about one hundred feet, formed by the steep rocks on the coast. A natural arch opens into the sea at the eastern end, into which boats are sometimes drawn and dashed to pieces. The mountains of greatest altitude in Aberdeenshire are—Buck, 2,377; Firmouth, 2,500; Cairneach and Scroneach, 2,700; Morven, 3,100; Montkeen, 3,180; Lochnagar, 3,800; Benaven, 3,920; Benaburd, 3,940; Cairntoul, 4,220; Macdui, or Ben-Macdui, 4,300; and Braeriach, 4,304 feet above the level of the sea, besides several others of less but considerable elevation.

COMMERCE, MANUFACTURES, MINERALS, &C.—The making of linen and sail-cloth has been successfully introduced in several parts, and Aberdeen is the seat of various other branches of manufacture. Shipbuilding, both wood and iron, is carried on in various parts of the county. The sea coast abounds in fish of great variety and richness, and the river and sea fishing, together, form a great source of wealth to the inhabitants. The herring fishery is prosecuted on a very extensive scale at Peterhead and Fraserburgh. Granite is a valuable and extensive production of this county, and presents an article of considerable traffic, many thousand tons being conveyed to London, and other distant parts, for paving and building purposes; it is chiefly found in the neighbourhoods of Aberdeen, Peterhead, New Pitsligo, and Monymusk. Other minerals are found in different parts of Aberdeenshire, and are eminently worthy of notice:—in the parish of Old Machar was discovered a valuable mine of manganese; Leslie produces amianthus, made by the peasants into snuff boxes and ornaments; plumbago has been found on the banks of the Deveron; and, near Peterhead, onyx pebbles are to be met with. The largest rock crystal ever found in Scotland was discovered upon the estate of Invercauld, in this county; its size was nearly that of a child's body at the age of four years. On the same estate have also been obtained amethysts and aqua-marines, equal in colour and hardness to those so eagerly sought after in the East. Topazes of great value, provincially called Cairngorm stones, are also to be met with in Aberdeenshire. Talc, mica, asbestos and amianthus, commonly called mountain cork, and mountain leather, are found in several of the hills, and in great variety. At Craig, in the district of Strathbogie, there is a fine flaxen asbestos, both green and white. This country produces plenty of game, black cattle, deer, sheep, horses, &c. A very great proportion of the landholders reside permanently or occasionally on their estates, and countenance by their presence many valuable improvements. The rearing of plantations and fences, the introduction of superior breeds of cattle, and better modes of agriculture, have for some time engaged their attention, to the manifest advantage of the district.

RIVERS AND SPRINGS, CANALS AND RAILWAYS.—The principal rivers of Aberdeenshire are the Dee, the Don, the Ythan, the Ugie, and the Deveron. These rivers are of great value, from the immense quantity and fineness of the salmon they produce; but are too rapid to admit of navigation to any great extent. The river Ythan deserves particular mention on account of the pearl fishery, being carried on in it with great success. The Dee runs through the Vale of Strathdee, surrounded with lofty mountains. On the Don are seen the princely ruins of Kildrummy Castle, another ancient seat of the Earls of Marr. At the top of the Vale of Braemar, a short way above Marr Lodge, is the noted waterfall called the Linn of Dee. In the valley of Glenmuick there is likewise another picturesque cascade; and a little below, on the southern banks of the Dee, most romantically situated, are Pannaich Fells, much frequented in summer. There are other sanitary springs at Peterhead, which possess chalybeate properties, and are in high repute. On the sea shore are several remarkable caves, curious pectorations in the rocks, and echoes which reverberate sounds with wonderful distinctness. The main line of railway intersecting Aberdeenshire is the Great North of Scotland and its numerous branches. The Deeside Railway, from Aberdeen to Ballater, though still the property of a separate company, is leased by the Great North of Scotland Railway, so that it has now absolute control of the whole of the railway traffic of the county.

DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION, &C.—This shire contains eighty-five parishes and three royal burghs—Aberdeen, Kintore, and Inverury. The contributory boroughs (or those which, in conjunction with others, are represented in the Senate) belonging to this county are Inverury, Kintore, and Peterhead. The city of Aberdeen returns one member, and the shire at large two; the gentleman representing the Eastern Division being the Hon. Sir Alexander H. Gordon, K.C.B. The gentleman representing the Western Division is Lord Douglas William Cope-Gordon. The county of Aberdeen in 1871 contained a population of 244,603—viz., 115,909 males and 128,694 females; in 1861 the figures were: males, 104,441; females, 117,128: total, 221,569.

ABERDEEN, OLD ABERDEEN, CULTS, WOODSIDE, AND NIGG (KINCARDINESHIRE).

ABERDEEN, a city and the capital of the county to which it gives name, is 109 miles nearly north from Edinburgh, 103 S.E. by E. from Inverness, and 540½ from London, and by means of its rail communication, it possesses easy access to any part of the United Kingdom. Aberdeen is of great antiquity, and is supposed to have been known to the Romans by the name of Devanha. Antecedently to this period, all relating to any history of Aberdeen or its origin is involved in obscurity; and for many ages after no records appear to afford any authentic accounts relating to it. Aberdeen is probably among the earliest of the burghs in Scotland found entitled to any royal marks of distinction; and from various circumstances occurring in history it is reasonable to presume that at a very early period it was a place of some commerce. As far back as 1153, it seems to have been known as such to the Normans; and in Macpherson's treatise on commerce it is observed that, in the year 1179, Estyn, one of the joint kings of that country, landed and pillaged the town in the course of a piratical cruise along the British coast. In early times Aberdeen was frequently visited by royalty; and it appears that King William, surnamed the Lion, had an edifice for his occasional residence here, which was situated at the lower side of the town, near the east end of what is called the Green, and was dignified by the title of Palace; this edifice was afterwards bestowed on the monks of the Holy Trinity, who were about that time introduced into Scotland. Her present Majesty Queen Victoria has visited Aberdeen, and during her residence at Balmoral, many of the inhabitants have benefited by her patronage. The first charter that was obtained by Aberdeen is supposed to have originated about the year 1179, and was granted by King William. It confirmed to the burgesses the power of enjoying their trade of merchandise as freely, quietly, fully and honourably as their ancestors did in the time of Malcolm, his grandfather; this charter was dated at Perth. King William afterwards granted two other charters; both these, which were dated at Aberdeen 28th August, are still in a good state of preservation, and have the great seal of Scotland, in green wax, appended to each. The great charter was granted by Charles I. and is dated at Oatlands, 1638, all previous charters are by it confirmed. This charter was subsequently confirmed by parliament. From these documents and other historical accounts, it is beyond all doubt that trade and commerce were a prevailing pursuit.

Aberdeen is pleasantly situated upon an eminence rising gradually from the sea, the beach presenting a beautiful even surface of fine hard sand. When the tide is receding, a person may walk for many miles along the shore, and contemplate a noble expanse of the German Ocean, which, from the town, has a fine appearance, and adds to the beauty of its picturesque situation. The new streets are spacious, uniform, and elegant; the houses are built of granite, which the neighbourhood produces. A noble street, named Union street, running to the west is particularly handsome. About the middle of this fine street a magnificent granite bridge, designed by Telford, of one arch, spanning one hundred and thirty feet, is thrown across a ravine, through which runs a brook called the Denburn. The Denburn is now arched over, and the Denburn Valley Railway, which forms a junction between the Caledonian and the Great North of Scotland Railway, runs over it for a short distance. The new joint station is a magnificent structure, undoubtedly the handsomest in Scotland. The waiting rooms, refreshment rooms, ticket offices, and offices of the companies, are all fitted up and finished in a very superior manner. The design of the roof cannot fail to elicit great admiration. It is modelled after the roof of the Victoria Station, Pimlico. The stone work of the structure has a fine appearance, as approached from Guild street, and the whole is well and substantially built. It was designed by Mr. Smith, the city architect. The modern part of the town has been all built within the last sixty years, and is of very considerable extent. Besides Union street, there are three other fine streets, namely, King street, Market street, and George street, and for some time past the city has been extending in every direction. In Castle street, stands a highly finished statue of George, late Duke of Gordon, erected by the gentlemen of the county. It is composed of that beautiful grey granite for which Aberdeen is so noted, and represents His Grace in a martial cloak, and head uncovered, with one foot placed upon a cannon, and both hands supported by a sword. The pedestal is a square slab of granite, and the height of the whole is about twenty feet. At the corner of Union terrace, near the bridge, is a beautiful bronze statue of his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort, placed on a pedestal of polished Peterhead granite; and in Union street, immediately opposite Market street, stands a fine statue of the Queen, in white marble, on a polished Peterhead granite pedestal—it is an excellent likeness, and was executed by the late Alexander Brodie, of Aberdeen. In the town house is an ancient coat of mail, said to have been worn by the provost of the city, at the battle of Harlaw; also the axe of the machine known by the name of the maiden, which in times of old was used for the decapitation of criminals.

The new Municipal and County Buildings and Court House are situate in Castle street and Union street, and form a most imposing and magnificent structure. They comprise all the offices required for municipal purposes, also a noble County Hall and Court House. The entrance to the municipal portion is by the door in the base of the tower facing Union buildings. A broad circular stone staircase of easy ascent leads to the Council Chamber, the rooms set apart for the officials, and other apartments. On reaching the first landing a lobby to the left leads to the Council Chamber. The Committee Room is entered from the same lobby, and is a square apartment, larger in proportion to its use than the Council Chamber. Above the mantelpiece is a mirror in a panel of carved oak, with the town's arms on the top, which stood in the old Council Chamber. The Provost's Room is a commodious apartment, looking into Broad street. The Town Clerk's Room has much the appearance of an advocate's office, as has also that of his assistants, which contain a number of old trophies of the city, not altogether devoid of interest. In the upper floor are the apartments of the Town House Keeper, and a number of rooms for general purposes. The Court House is situated in the centre of the north-east portion of the building, and is thus removed from the noise of street traffic. The public entrance is by the doorway in the centre of the building in Castle street. The entrance hall is very lofty, and has a groined freestone roof and elaborately carved gorbal terminations. The staircase leads by an easy flight to the main corridor or Court Hall, and then divides into two side flights which lead up to the Town and County Hall, which is situated in the centre of the building facing Castle street. This hall is of large size. The ceiling of the staircase, which measures about 35 feet square, is panelled with pitch pine. Light is admitted by three lofty windows on either side. The Court-room is situated on the east side of the main corridor, which is connected with the first landing. The room is 51 feet in length by 39 in breadth, and 33 in height. At the west end is a small gallery, access to which is had by two narrow staircases entering from the corridor. The accommodation provided for the public will seat about 300 individuals. The whole room has been finished in a most artistic manner, and presents a pleasing appearance to the eye. Access may be had by seven different entrances. On the left of the corridor on entering is a staircase, which leads up to a suite of rooms set apart for the procurators fiscal and their clerks, a small Court-room for the trial of summary cases, hearing proofs, examining bankrupts, &c. At the end of the corridor is a passage leading to the Advocates' Buildings. A continuation of the south passage eastward leads to the corridor of the eastern entrance to the buildings immediately under the old tower reserved for the judges.

The Post Office is in Market street, and was erected in 1876 to take the place of the old one erected in 1845, which, since the transfer of the telegraphs, had been found far too limited for the despatch of the business which is rapidly expanding year by year. It is a handsome building, built of white Kenmay granite, and consists of a basement, partly underground, and two storeys above the street level. The two principal elevations, facing Market-street and the harbour, are designed in the Renaissance style. The chief elevation, facing Market-street, is rounded off at the two extreme corners, which contain doorways, with carved consoles and moulded cornices; and the centre division, containing the chief entrance, projects slightly in advance of the remaining portion. The architect for the building was Mr. R. Matheson, and the contractors Messrs. Coutts and Sons, of Aberdeen. In 1864, the number of letters delivered at Aberdeen Post Office was 3,349,272, and in 1871 they had increased to 4,157,400. The total number of newspapers passing through the office in 1871 was 567,923; of book packets, circulars, and patterns, 502,359; of post cards, 273,553; money orders issued, 30,714; amount, £56,384; money orders paid, 39,790; amount, £78,153; amount of commission on money orders, £451 7s. 1d. Savings Banks deposits number 2,460; amount, £6,811; withdrawals number 1,099; amount, £6,218.

The Music Hall Buildings at the west end of Union street are the property of the Aberdeen Music Hall Company, Limited. This elegant edifice is decorated with a portico of six columns of the Ionic order, thirty feet in height. The principal entrance, under the portico, leads into an outer vestibule, having a flight of six steps conducting to the grand saloon, which is sixty feet in length and twenty feet in breadth, and is divided into three compartments by fluted Ionic columns, with ornamented capitals and corresponding pilasters. The centre part is thirty-two feet high, and the ceiling is a dome, finished with coffering. In the middle of the building, and opening into the saloon, through a screen of columns, is a spacious gallery or promenade, seventy feet in length, finished with pilasters, and an arched and panelled ceiling. It communicates on the one side with the ball room, and on the other with the supper or refreshment room, and the card saloon. The end of the gallery opens into the banquetting room, which is of the same dimensions with the ball room, the walls are finished with pilasters, in imitation of Sienna marble, with ornamental capitals. The whole forms a superb suite of rooms, opening into each other by folding doors, and presenting vistas the full length of the building. The expense of erection was £11,500; the foundation stone was laid on the 26th of April, 1820. The Corn Exchange, erected in 1854, is the property of a joint-stock company; the cost of erection was about £1,000. The Masonic Hall is in Exchange-street, the foundation stone was laid on the 27th of September, 1871. The building contains, on the ground floor, three shops; on the first floor there are two large rooms, which may be leased either along with the shops or separately. The remainder of the building is used exclusively by the Masonic Lodge in Aberdeen, and consists of a hall 50 feet by 32 feet, and 20 feet high, with a gallery at one end. There are also three rooms adjoining, and in connection with the hall. The hall has three lofty windows to Stirling street, filled with stained glass. The building was designed by Mr. James Matthews; the cost was £2,500, which was defrayed by shares of £1 each. The Market Cross, near the western extremity of Castle street, cannot be too highly admired, whether as an architectural object or as an antiquarian curiosity. It is of an hexagonal form, with a pillar rising from the centre. In a cornice around the upper part of the structure are twelve compartments for figures, cut in relief; ten of these contain the portraits of Scottish monarchs, the last of the series being James VII., in whose time the edifice was completed. This fine erection was once removed by the magistrates, but was afterwards restored by civic authorities of better taste. The Market House, which stands in Market street, is one of the largest and most beautiful buildings of its kind in the kingdom; it was erected by a joint-stock company, and opened in 1842. It contains two floors and north and south galleries. In the west end of the market is a beautiful fountain of polished Peterhead granite. The Theatre is situated in Guild street, adjoining the Imperial Hotel. It is 74 feet 8 inches in length, with a mean depth of 90 feet, and the height of the front is 50 feet from the street. The entrance doors for the public are five in number, all to the front. Commodious refreshment, retiring, and cloak-rooms are provided for visitors. The theatre is seated for 1,670 persons. The stage and all its appliances are of the most approved modern description. The Barracks on the Castle hill are fitted up for the convenience of six hundred men, although, according to the usual mode of military accommodation, they are capable of containing double this number; there is an excellent hospital attached to them on an adjoining eminence. The town is admirably paved with granite, well lighted with gas, and plentifully supplied with excellent water, taken from the Dee, about three miles and a half above the village of Banchory. The arrangements for cleansing the streets and watching the city are fully efficient.

The port of Aberdeen is admirable adapted for commercial intercourse with the northern parts of Europe, and it also participates in a good share of trade with America and the West Indies. Early in the seventeenth century, a considerable number of ships, of small tonnage, belonging to the port. A considerable import and export trade was carried on with various parts of the continent, as well as coast trading. The shipping appears to have considerably decayed during the civil wars and visitations of the plague, and no revival took place for many years. In 1656 there were only nine vessels of the aggregate amount of 440 tons. In 1692 all the shipping was two galliots of thirty tons each. Soon after this time, however, when the affairs of the country got into a more settled state, we find shipping, along with general trade, making considerable progress. In 1788, the number of ships registered was 169, and the aggregate tonnage, 11,820; and in 1818, the ships registered were 237; tonnage, 36,471; in 1872, 218 vessels; tonnage, 100,279. Of late years the number of ships has not so much increased as the tonnage. In the year 1865 the average of tonnage per ship was 34, while in 1876 it was 494. The number of vessels, including steamers, registered in the port of Aberdeen was in 1876, 220; amount of tonnage 108,067. Notwithstanding that a large portion of trade is absorbed by the railways north and south, the imports and exports are increasing yearly; though in some departments, such as the exports of cattle and salmon, sea transports shows a decline. The total revenue for 1876 was £45,118. The number of sailing and steam vessels entered and cleared in the colonial, foreign, and coasting trades in 1876 was—British, 2,866; tonnage, 666,937; foreign, 231; tonnage, 52,298. Revenue of the customs for the same year, £93,208; revenue from whiskey, £45,530; total, £138,738. Since the year 1810, when the principal improvement in the harbour commenced, there has been expended upon it vast sums. The diversion of the river and the new breakwater are two of the latest undertakings. The first turf cut in the diversion of the river was by Lord Provost Leslie on the 22nd of December, 1869. The new course is about a mile in length, and forms a large arc of a circle, from the suspension bridge to about opposite Marischal street, and from that point to Torry, where it joins the harbour entrance. The bottom of the new channel is 170 feet wide. The north bank has a gradient of 1 in 3, and the south bank 1 in 10. There is a fine slope for salmon fishing, and as the ground is mostly composed of fine sand, it affords capital and safe bathing accommodation; the new breakwater, the entire length of which is 1,200 feet, has recently been completed. this has carried the work out to a depth of water 50 feet at high tide. Extensive improvements are now (1877) being effected at the harbour entrance. Powerful machinery and extensive appliances of various sorts are in full operation, and the progress made must be regarded as in every way satisfactory to the Harbour Commissioners and the public, and creditable in the highest degree to Mr. Dyce Cay, the engineer to the board and the staff under him.

The fame of the "clipper bow," so justly due to the ship builders here, especially to Mr. Hall who has successfully established his claim to the invention, has spread the fame of Aberdeen shipbuilding to all quarters of the world. From May 1864 to May 1865 there were built and launched 11 ships of the aggregate of 8,885 tons, giving an average of about 780 tons per ship. In 1870 there were built 12 vessels, aggregate tonnage 6,305, six sailing vessels and six steamers, and the number has now (1877) considerably increased. The salmon fishings on the Dee and Don have for long formed an important branch of industry; but whatever the effect may be of recent legislation in fostering the breed of this fish, the statistics of many bygone years show a marked decline in the produce of the Dee and Don river and coast fishings.

Aberdeen has been the seat of manufacture from a very early period. We find Provost Jaffray, with his coadjutors, establishing a woollen manufactory in 1636, in the Correction wynd, under the patent of Charles I. for the manufacture of "broad cloth, kerseys, serges, and other coarse cloths." The manufacture of these and of stockings had been cultivated so successfully and extensively for some time, that Sir Patrick Drummond, conservator of Holland, remarked that "Scotland was more obliged to the town of Aberdeen for returns of money in its export trade than all other towns in Scotland." Messrs. Alexander Hadden & Sons, have three establishments—in the Green, at Garlogie Mills, and at Gordon's Mills. Their chief produce are carpets, tweeds, hosiery, worsted and woollen yarns. In addition to the material manufactured on their premises, they give employment to a great number of women over the country by giving out worsted to be knitted into hose. Messrs. Crombie, of Grandholm Mills, are also large manufacturers. The manufacture of winceys seems to have originated with the late firm of Messrs. John Barker & Sons, of Gordon's Mills. It is now successfully carried on by many firms in Aberdeen. The demand still continues to expand, the quality of the Aberdeen fabrics being found very superior. Jute spinning is also carried out to som extent here. The only cotton spinning establishment now in Aber deen is that of Banner Mill, belonging to Messrs. Robinson, Crum & Co. Limited. The manufacture of combs was introduced about the year 1830, by Messrs. Stewart & Rowall, and has been conducted on a very extensive scale since that period, first by the original firm, and latterly by Mr. Stewart and his son. It is also carried on by Messrs. John M'Pherson & Co. and Mr. C. Elrick. Eleven firms are engaged in the manufacture of preserved provisions. All manner of fish, flesh, soups, vegetables, fruits, &c., are preserved in tin cases of all sizes, and every variety of preparation. Messrs. Mitchell & Muil, biscuit manufacturers to the Queen, have an extensive manufactory here. The extensive paper-works at Stoneywood, carried on by Messrs. Pirie & Sons, were established nearly one hundred years ago, and they are the largest manufacturers in Scotland. Messrs. C. Davidson & Son, Limited, manufacture very extensively wrapping and packing papers of all kinds; they have also a patent for making paper bags, in which they do a considerable trade. Messrs. Thomas Tait & Son, of Inverurie Mills, have a mill for the manufacture of printing papers. There are several large horticultural builders in Aberdeen, among the most prominent may be mentioned Messrs. J Garvie & Sons, and D. Macandrew & Co,; the former have erected hothouses for Her Majesty at Balmoral. The chemical works at Sandilands, near the Links, cover several acres of ground, and were begun by Messrs. John Miller & Co., in 1848, for the purpose of working up the Gas Company's liquid products into naphtha, creosote oil, asphalte, sulphate of ammonia, &c. But several branches have been added since, the most important of which are the manufacture of artificial manures, paraffin wax, sulphuric acid, &c. The distillation of whisky is carried on extensively in Aberdeen by John Begg, of the famed Lochnagar Distillery (who has solely supplied all the Royal Palaces since 1848); Messrs. Henry Ogg & Co. of the Strathdee Distillery, and the Bon-Accord Distillery Co. Limited, &c.

The granite trade may be said to be indigenous to Aberdeen. The greater part of the county, and portions of the adjoining dis tricts, is composed of igneous rock of all varieties, the quarrying of which commenced about 250 years ago, but made little progres till the year 1741, when a disastrous fire occurring in Aberdeen, destroyed a large number of the wooden houses of which the town was chiefly composed. An act of the magistrates and council was then passed ordaining the outside walls of dwelling houses to be built of stone or brick. About 1764 the streets of London began to be paved with Aberdeen granite; but it was not till 1795 that larger blocks were required, and machinery began to be applied. Rubislaw Quarries then supplied stones for the Government docks; and Dancing Cairn, which began to be wrought about this time, supplied granite for Union Bridge, and the new street extension of the city. Subsequently the demand has considerably increased, as granite is used extensively in the construction of bridges, docks, and other public works. There are over 20 quarries in operation in the district, yielding granite of various colour and quality. The quantity of stone quarried annually is about 55,000 tons, 40,000 of which is exported chiefly from this port. The trade is estimated to be increasing at the rate of about 500 tons annually. The facilities afforded by the railways in lessening the expense of carriage from the various quarries has tended to increase the demand. Granite polishing has now acquired large dimensions here. About 50 years ago, the late Mr. Macdonald was the first to apply machinery to the cutting and polishing of granite. The present firm, Messrs. Macdonald, Field & Co., had the honour to supply the enormous granite sarcophagus (30 tons weight), now containing the remains of his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort, in the royal mausoleum at Frogmore, besides a smaller one for Her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent. John Fraser & Son, of the granite works, Broadford; Messrs. Petrie, of the Clayhills Granite Works; Mr. Keith, of King street, with other firms, do considerable business. The process of all their operations is by steam machinery. From 10,000 to 12,000 tons of granite per annum are used for polishing purposes at the various works. The demand for polished granite increases every year, and orders for architectural, general, and monumental purposes come from all parts of the world to the Granite City.

There are three Joint Stock Companies for the manufacture and sale of agricultural materials. The Commercial, the Lime, and the Northern Agricultural, each of them having steam mills for pulverising bones. The latter, in addition, carries on the manufacture of oilcake, linseed oil, rape oil, &c. Messrs. Ben. Reid & Co. have a large establishment for the manufacture of agricultural implements. Messrs. Harper & Co. carry on an extensive business in the manufacture of agricultural implements and machinery and wire weaving, especially the construction of wire suspension bridges. Three brick and tile manufacturing companies, two soap and candle manufactories, ten coach builders, and many other large establishments, of which our space prevents us from giving details, are located here. The iron and metal works employ a large number of skilled workmen. There are several engineering establishments and foundries, with other works connected with shipping —sail and rope works, boiler making, &c. &c. Apart from the import of foreign timber, there is a large business carried on in home-grown wood, from the upper districts of Aberdeenshire. Deeside fir has been a staple article in Aberdeen from time immemorial.

The earliest banking company formed in Aberdeen was started in 1752. It was begun on a scale which must now be regarded as limited, even for the comparatively moderate requirements of that period, and it was not long ere the scheme was relinquished. In 1766 the "Aberdeen Banking Company" was originated, and long enjoyed almost a monopoly of the banking business of the north. About twenty-five years ago it was merged in the "Union Bank of Scotland," sinking its individual title. It still maintains a good connection, and continues to do a considerable business, both in the town and over the northern district. Besides representatives of most of the Edinburgh and Glasgow Banks, there are in Aberdeen two thriving native banks. The Aberdeen Town and County Bank, established in 1825, having fifty-two branches, and the North of Scotland Bank in 1836, with fifty-four branches. By each of these two establishments (which are both incorporated by Act of Parliament) an extensive business is carried on at their head and branch offices in the city, and through their numerous agencies in the principal towns and villages in the northern counties, as well as in several counties south of Aberdeen. The banking houses in Aberdeen are, on the whole, elegant structures. That of the Town and County Bank occupies an excellent position in the angle formed by the junction of St. Nicholas street with the line of Union street. The North of Scotland Bank occupies a similar position in the corner where the western side of King street joins Castle street. The National Security Savings Bank has been long in operation, and is well patronised by the special class of depositors for which it is designed. Aberdeen is the head station of two highly respectable insurance companies, namely, the Scottish Provincial, established in 1825, and the Northern in 1836.

A regular communication is maintained with London, Edinburgh, Newcastle, Hull, and the Orkneys and the Shetlands, by steam packets, a species of conveyance which has done more to lay open the north-east shore of Scotland to improvements from the south than any other means. In addition to the above, there exists the means of rapid transit by the Caledonian Railway and other lines to all parts south of Aberdeen; and access is given to the north by the Great North of Scotland and the Highland Railways open to Wick and Thurso, and the Dingwall and Skye railway to Strome Ferry in Ross-shire. The Dee Side line to Banchory was opened in 1853, and is now extended to Ballater. Of other conveyances the Directory furnishes full information.

The first hotel for size and beauty is the Imperial, a massive structure of five storeys, built of grey granite, in the Gothic Venetian style and situated in Guild street, adjoining the railway station. It was built from the foundation for an hotel, and cost £15,000, and the furnishing £6,000. The Douglas, in Market street, and the Palace, Adelphi, and Forsyth's, Union street, are also first-class hotels. There are besides many excellent inns, which afford accommodation to various grades of travellers.

The burghal constitution of Aberdeen has undergone various alterations since its first establishment. The original magistracy consisted of an alderman, four bailies, and a common council, chosen by the inhabitants; subsequently this arrangement gave way before the gradual and perfect introduction of a self-electing system. From the year 1817 until 1826 the city revenues were gathered by and dispensed under the control of trustees. The credit of the burgh may now be considered as good as that of any in the kingdom. In 1871 its revenues produced a surplus of £1,250. The council now consists of a provost, six bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, a master of shore works, a master of kirk and bridge works, a master of mortification, a master of Guild Brethren Hospital, and twelve councillors. By the "Aberdeen Municipal Extension Act, 1871," the whole powers and authorities of the former Commissioners of Police are transferred to the Town Council, and the business of the Police Department is managed by separate committees. By the same Act the undertaking of the former Gas Light Company is also transferred to the Town Council. The circuit court of justiciary for the counties of Aberdeen, Banff, and Kincardine is held in Aberdeen in the months of April and September, for the trial of criminal cases, at which one or two lords of justiciary preside; and here also appeals from inferior courts in civil cases are decided. A sheriff's court is held every Wednesday and Friday; a justice of peace court quarterly, and their small debt court fortnightly. A sheriff's small debt court and a commissary court also sit at stated periods. The city returns one member to the imperial parliament, the gentleman now (1877) sitting is John F. Leith, Esq. Aberdeen confers the title of earl on a branch of the noble family of Gordon, which was distinguished for its active loyalty to the crown in the seventeenth century.

The municipal institutions consist of seven incorporated trades:—1, the Hammermen, incorporated September, 1519; 2, the Bakers, recognised as a company as early as the year 1398; 3, the Wrights and Coopers, who obtained their original seal of cause on the 5th of August, 1527; 4, the Tailors, who were recognised in a corporate capacity about the year 1511; 5, the Shoemakers, acknowledged as a corporate body in the years 1484 and 1520; 6, the Weavers, the deacons of this corporation were approved by the council and sworn into office in the year 1449; and 7, the Fleshers or Butchers; these originally dealt in fish as well as flesh, but were prohibited in the year 1518, from practising more trades than one; they received a seal of cause in 1534. The affairs of each corporation are under the direction of a deacon, box-master, and masters, who are chosen annually. The late Rev. Dr. William Guild mortified certain funds, to afford pecuniary relief to members of the incorporated trades, should they happen to be reduced to indigence. The Advocates' Hall is in Broad street. This society was erected into a corporate body in 1774, and had their privileges confirmed in more ample terms in 1799 and in 1862. A library, principally on law subjects, was established in 1786; it contains about five thousand volumes. The number of members belonging to this institution is about 150. Among several clubs formed in this city, the "Royal Northern Club," and the "New Club" are the principal. The Mechanics' Institute, in Market street, was erected in 1824, it is in the Italian style of architecture, and contains a good library, reading room, and news room, &c. The various institutions of a charitable, social, educational, and humane character are numerous and well supported. A list of them will be found under the head "Public Buildings," &c. Two daily and six weekly newspapers are issued from the Aberdeen press—their titles and other particulars are given in their place. The first almanac ever printed in Scotland was published in Aberdeen, in 1677, by a printer named John Forbes: it was entitled "A New Prognosticator, calculated for North Britain." He sold fifty thousand copies annually, and the price of each was only a plack, or the third part of a penny sterling. His success induced the publication of pirated editions at Edinburgh, which were suppressed by the Court of Session, and for many years the town enjoyed a complete monopoly in the sale of almanacs.

East and West churches:—These form one building, and occupy the site of the ancient parish church of St. Nicholas, which consisted of nave and aisles, transept and chancel, and was built progressively probably between the 10th and the 12th century. The present West church occupies the site of the old nave, and was erected about 140 years ago, from a design by the celebrated architect Gibbs, who was a native of Aberdeen. It is in the Roman style, with nave and side aisles divided by massive square piers and semi-circular arches, and has a finely proportioned interior. It contains sittings for about 1,450. There are several monuments in it worthy of attention, particularly one in marble to the memory of the late Mrs. Allardyce, of Dunottar, which is a splendid specimen of the talents of the sculptor Bacon. The Old East church, which it was deemed necessary to take down in 1835, was built in 1477, on the site of the chancel, and formed the choir of the church. The east end was semi-octagonal, and under it was St. Mary's chapel, which still remains. The present East church was erected in 1836, from a design by the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, in the decorated Gothic style, of finely dressed granite. The old transept (known as Drum's and Collison's aisles) was at the same time lengthened southwards, and formed a vestibule for the east and west churches. Over the transept at its intersection with the churches there was a short tower with a wooden steeple, which on the 9th October, 1874, was destroyed by fire along with the interior of the East church and Drums and Collison's aisles. The East church has since been restored, and contains sittings for about 1,350 people; and a handsome new tower with spire of granite is now being erected from a design by Mr. W. Smith, architect, Aberdeen. The spire will rise to the height of about 195 feet from the ground. The old Norman arches and piers under the tower have been taken down and rebuilt in their original form with the old stones. St. Clement's church, or Foot Dee church, has a tower forty-five feet high, with a clock presented by the magistrates. Greyfriars, or College church, which stands on the east of Broad street, near Marischal College, is said to have been erected by Bishop Dunbar, for the grey friars, about the beginning of the sixteenth century, and is now the only church in town where the Roman Catholic worship was performed previously to the Reformation. St. Paul's chapel was erected in 1721, for the accommodation of such of the Episcopalians as refused to submit to the jurisdiction of the Scottish bishops. It contained sittings for 1,000 persons, This has lately been superseded by a very handsome new church. St. Andrew's, or Scotch Episcopalian chapel, is an elegant edifice, built in 1818; in it is performed the service of the Church of England. It occupies a site on the east side of King street; the gable or end fronts the street, presenting a centre and side aisles, the corners of which are ornamented with lofty octagonal turrets, those on each side of the entrance being upwards of eighty feet in height. The roof of the interior is lofty, and adorned with the appropriate ornaments of the antique Gothic Hall. The building combines, in an eminent degree, convenience of arrangement with simple elegance of design. The South church is situated in Belmont street, and is calculated to accommodate 1,450 persons. It is in the Gothic style, and is distinguished by a handsome square tower, which forms a striking object in the approach from the south. The North church, in King street, is a handsome building, in the Grecian style, executed in finely dressed granite, from a design by the late John Smith, architect, and contains sittings for about 1,450. Old Machar church, at the north extremity of Old Aberdeen, in the parish of Old Machar, consists of the nave of a cathedral founded by Bishop Alexander Kyninmunde II., about the middle of the fourteenth century. The ceiling is of the finest oak, of curious workmanship, and may vie with anything of the kind in Scotland. It consists of three compartments of square panels, joining at the opposite angular points. On these panels are painted the arms and titles of the princes, nobles, and prelates who contributed towards the expenses of the building. Along the top of the walls, on the south side, are inscribed the names of the successive sovereigns from Malcolm II. to Queen Mary. On the north side are the names of the several bishops, from Nectanus to William Gordon, the last Roman Catholic prelate. All these inscriptions, as well as those on the roof, are painted in the old black Saxon characters. The turreta are finished with panelling and richly crocketed pinnacles. The entrance gate is embellished with clustered columns and crocketed mouldings, and the windows are finished with tracery in a corresponding style. The interior presents a simple style of Gothic architecture, corresponding with the entrance front. At the west end is a large and fine toned organ, underneath which is a handsome monument to the memory of the late Bishop Skinner. Saint John's Chapel, in St. Mary's place, for Scotch Episcopolians, has a small spire on the north end, and will contain about 500 persons; the interior has undergone much alteration and repair. The new Catholic church of the Assumption, in the early pointed Gothic style, in Huntly street, was consecrated on the 16th of March, 1859. Longitudinally the church is almost east and west, with a nave, north and south aisles, north and south porches, tower and spire, the latter reaching to a height of 200 feet, in which there is a peal of nine bells, the largest weighing 30 cwt. The sanctuary, situated at the east end, forms a continuation of the nave. On each side of the sanctuary are vestries; and in advance of the high altar, which is raised seven steps, are two side altars under arched recesses, formed in the east end of the aisles. Internally the dimensions of the church are one hundred and fifty feet in length, sixty-nine feet wide, and sixty-nine feet high from the floor to the apex of the roof, and it will comfortably seat 1,500 persons. The whole of the windows, excepting the large west one, are filled with fine painted glass by Wailes, of Newcastle. The principal entrance is from Huntly street, and above this entrance is the large west window, which is thirty feet high by fifteen feet in width, with tracery and sculptured figures in the centre. On the north side is the priest's house, and on the south a convent, the schools running backwards from the convent along the wall of the south aisle—all having access by a doorway to the church—the whole of which (the arcade excepted), is built of Aberdeen granite. The cost of erection was about £20,000, and the bells £1,300 in addition; the architect was Alexander Ellis, Esq. There is in connection with the church a very handsome schoolhouse, in Constitution street, erected in 1832, from a design by the late John Smith, architect, in which are educated Catholic children belonging to the congregation. In addition to these places of worship, there are others belonging to various denominations, for the names and situations of which we must refer our readers to a list given at a subsequent page, where will be found also the names of the officiating ministers.

The two colleges which now form the University of Aberdeen are very ancient seminaries of learning—King's College in Old Aberdeen, and Marischal College in Broad street. The former was first instituted in the year 1494 by a bull of Pope Alexander VI., dated at Rome, February 10. The original foundation charter is still extant in the charter chest of the college. The library, to which all the students have free access, is a very valuable collection of books; the museum, also for their use, is furnished with an extensive assemblage of Greek and Roman coins, specimens of mineralogy and zoology, fine engravings, and a good assortment of most things interesting in natural history. The students wear a scarlet cloth gown, but do not reside within the college. The building forms a quadrangular court; the east end is a plain structure containing the public hall, and class-rooms underneath; the north-east corner is a lofty building of six storeys. On the north side are the public school and library hall. On the south-east corner is a lofty square tower, strengthened by buttresses and covered with a flat roof, having on the top a parapet, over which springs from each of its corners a slip of stonework highly ornamented; these slips meet at the top and form four open arches, in imitation of an imperial crown. On the top of this is a stone lantern, surmounted with another imperial crown of stonework, with a globe and cross. The tower formerly contained a peal of thirteen bells. The south side of the court consists of a plain building one hundred and twelve feet long, with a piazza underneath; there was anciently a round tower at each end, but one only now remains. The common hall is ornamented with portraits of Bishops Elphiston, Dunbar, &c. The erection of these buildings commenced about the year 1500. Marischal College was founded and endowed by George, Earl Marischal of Scotland, by charter dated the 2nd day of April, 1583. Some years since the old college, which was inconvenient, was taken down, and a grant obtained from the government for the erection of a new one immediately adjoining. The foundation stone was laid in 1837, and the building finished in 1841, at a cost of £21,240. Of this sum government granted £15,000, and the balance was raised by public subscription. The new college is a spacious, elegant and convenient building, in the Gothic style, from a design by the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, architect. It forms three sides of a square of one hundred feet. From the centre of the middle compartment springs a lofty tower, surmounted by an observatory; the public hall and museum extending the whole length of one of the sides—the approach to them is by a noble staircase of polished granite. The philosophical apparatus belonging to this college is perhaps the finest and most extensive in the kingdom.

The Grammar School is a new and handsome building at the west end of the town. It is in the old Scotch baronial style, and was built in 1863, at a cost of about £15,000, from plans drawn by James Matthews, of Aberdeen. It contains a large public school, 80 feet by 40 feet, lofty, airy and well lighted; five class rooms on the ground floor for the classical department, and four class rooms for arithmetic, writing and modern languages; the library and reading room are in the upper storey. The school is of very ancient origin, the first recorded date being as far back as 1262. There are nearly thirty bursaries in connection with the school, for the education of poor scholars, and in 1634 Dr. Patrick Dunn left a handsome bequest for the better payment of the masters. Many eminent men have received their education here, among whom may be mentioned Lord Byron, 1797; Sir James M'Gregor, 1784; David Wedderburn, 1602; Thomas Reid, private secretary to James VI.; Dr. James Dunn, Dr. James Melvin, &c. The Free Church Divinity Hall is a beautiful building in the Elizabethan style of architecture, erected in 1850, at a cost of £2,000. In this hall the Aberdeen Presbytery of the Free Church hold their stated meetings. Robert Gordon's Hospital, School hill, is a spacious building, standing on the ground anciently possessed by the Dominican friars, and having an extensive piece of ground in front. It consists of a centre or main building and two wings. The original structure occupies the greater part of the centre, and is three storeys in height, having a small neat spire rising from it. The hall on the second floor is 80 feet by 20 feet wide and 12 feet high. This building was erected in 1739 after a design by Gibbs, and at an expense of £3,300. The remaining part of the centre and the wings were completed in 1832 from a design by the late John Smith, Esq., at an expense of about £13,000. The latter erection is in the Grecian style of architecture, presenting a chaste and elegant appearance. The more ancient part has been altered to correspond, and a colonnade now traverses the building from the old house to the projecting fronts at the ends of the wings. The ground in front, which is tastefully laid out, much improves the appearance of the edifice. The sum originally bequeathed was £10,000; this was invested in land of constantly increasing value, so that at the present time the annual revenue is about £4,000. The object of the charity is to maintain and educate the sons and grandsons of of decayed burgesses. A Trades' Hospital was founded in 1632 by Dr. Gould, one of the town's ministers, afterwards principal of King's College, and in the year 1633 the same gentleman granted to the members of the town's corporations the monastery and other property which had formerly belonged to the monks of the Holy Trinity, for the benefit of their indigent brethren; the Town Council also gave 1,000 merks, and the different corporations made liberal contributions. The new buildings were designed by the late John Smith, Esq., and erected in 1846-7; the old building, with the ground &c. having been sold to the Aberdeen Railway Company in 1845.

The Royal Infirmary, which is situated on Woolman hill, is a modern erection, and consists of a central compartment and projecting wings, the length in front being about one hundred and fifty feet, and the breadth one hundred and twelve. The building rises to the height of three lofty storeys, the lowest containing the requisite offices for the establishment, and the other floors wards and private apartments. There is accommodation for 300 patients. One of the wings is so contrived that it may be used as a separate fever hospital. In the centre of the upper part of the front is a spacious operation room, lighted from above through a dome thirty feet in diameter. The whole is designed in a simple style of Grecian architecture and executed in dressed granite. From the elegance of the design and the beauty of the materials, as well as the situation of the building, it forms an ornamental feature of the city from various points of view, and is allowed to be a highly creditable proof of the skill of the architect, the late A. Simpson, Esq., to whose talents the city is indebted for some of its most tasteful public buildings and private mansions. The Lunatic Asylum consists of two buildings, one of which was raised in 1800, the other in 1819. The insufficiency of the old building for the purposes of the institution rendering the erection of a more spacious and commodious one necessary, an adjoining field of three acres was purchased, and an elegant edifice erected according to a plan by the architect of the infirmary, the late Archibald Simpson, Esq. Since that period it has received additions, under the superintendence of William Ramage, Esq., architect. Elmhill House is an establishment of a superior description, in connection with and under the same management as the Royal Asylum, designed for the accommodation of the wealthier class of patients. The Asylum for the Blind, situated in Huntly street, was endowed by Miss Cruickshank, and opened in 1843. There is accommodation for forty inmates. The funds of this charity received an important accession from the bequest of the late Miss Janet Walker, of Kirkhill. Several trades are taught, as the making of baskets, mats, rope, twine, weaving, &c. The Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb is in Belmont street, and is principally supported by voluntary contributions. The average number of pupils of both sexes is thirty. The Boys' and Girls' Hospital in King Street road was instituted in 1852. Its objects are the maintenance and education of poor children of the parish of Saint Nicholas. The Medical Society's Hall, King street, has a handsome front, with a portico of four Ionic columns. It contains a library and museum, a large room for the meetings of the society, committee rooms, &c. It was built in 1818, at a cost of £2,000, from the plan of the architect of the infirmary. In the hall are some portraits, among the rest, an original painting of Harvey, by Vandyke. There are also two by T. Miles, Esq. R.A. which are both favourable specimens of the skill of this distinguished native artist.

The weekly markets are held on Tuesday and Friday, and the annual fairs are Paschal market on the last Wednesday in April (old style), and Wednesday after the third Tuesday in October (feeing) markets before the 26th of May, Friday before and after 22nd November; and (wool) markets last Thursday and Friday of first and second week in July; (timber) the last Wednesday in August. The population of Aberdeen, according to the returns for 1871, amounted to 88,189—39,792 males and 48,397 females. The inhabited houses at the same date were 6,716. In 1861 the population numbered 73,305.

Old Aberdeen stands about a mile to the north of the city, on an eminence on the south bank of the river Don, in the parish of Old Machar, of which it is the capital. Formerly this town was the seat of the Bishop of Aberdeen, but it now derives its original importance from King's College (amalgamated with the University of Aberdeen) and the Cathedral. The charter was renewed by George I. when a power was conferred of electing its own magistrates, which are now provost, three bailies, a treasurer, and council, with the deacons of six incorporated trades. The principal curiosity in the neighbourhood is the old bridge, which crosses the river Don by one Gothic pointed arch, the only structure of the kind in Scotland, if not in the United Kingdom. Mr. Kennedy, in his "Annals of Aberdeen," states it to have been erected by Robert Bruce. The parish of Old Machar lies in the peninsula between the Dee and the Don, where they join the ocean. Its length is about seven or eight miles, and its greatest breadth four. The land rises in a gentle slope from the sea, and is beautifully diversified by undulating grounds. The windings of the Dee and Don—the manufactories and the woods on the banks of the latter, interspersed with many gentlemen's seats and villas, together with the numerous admirable prospects of the sea—impart a pleasing variety to the general appearance of the parish. Great improvements in agriculture, at a very considerable expense, have been effected, which have been the means of materially enhancing the value of the land, and beautifying the neighbourhood of Aberdeen. The parish of Old Machar possesses an acreage of 12,143; in 1871 its population was 42,477.

Nigg is a parish in Kincardineshire, situated near the termination of the ridge of the Grampian mountains. It is bounded by the Dee on the north, which separates it from Aberdeen, and on the south and west by Banchory-Davenick. It extends four miles in length by two in breadth. The coast is bold and rocky. The north-east point, called Girdleness, is a remarkable promontory, forming the south side of the estuary of the Dee. There is a small bay called the Bay of Nigg, at the head of which stands the parish church. The district contains the fishing village of Torry, which has a small harbour and pier, and also the village of Cove. A bridge is in contemplation to connect the village of Torry with Aberdeen. The parish has an acreage of 4,432. The population in 1871 was 2,348; Torry at the same date numbered 680, and Cove 450.

ALFORD,

GLENBUCKET, KEIG, KILDRUMMY, MIDMARR, STRATHDON, TOUGH, TOWIE AND TULLYNESSLE WITH FORBES.

ALFORD is a village and parish—the former, the seat of a presbytery, is 27 miles from Aberdeen, and 18 from Huntly, and is the terminus of the Alford Valley line, a branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish is seven miles in length, and about three in breadth. Markets are held on the 14th November and every third Tuesday: the half-yearly feeing markets being held on the Mondays before the 26th May and the 22nd November.

KEIG, a small parish intersected by the Don, is nearly of a circular form, and between three and four miles in diameter. Castle Forbes, the seat of Lord Forbes, is in this parish, surrounded by thriving plantations, besides a natural wood of considerable extent. The seat commands a fine view of the windings of the river Don for many miles. The parish is about twenty-five miles from Aberdeen.

GLENBUCKET is a small highland parish in the district of Marr, 29 miles from Huntly, situated on both sides of the Bucket, a tributary stream to the Don, and extending four miles in length by about one in breadth. The ruins of Badenyon House, alluded to in the popular Scotch song of "John of Badenyon," are in this parish.

STRATHDON parish lies between those of Glenbucket and Kildrummy. The land in this district is for the most part fertile and tolerably well cultivated.

KILDRUMMY parish lies in a valley, distant 35 miles from Aberdeen, and 16 from Huntly. The castle of Kildrummy, which anciently belonged to David, Earl of Huntingdon and Garioch, was a seat of King Robert Bruce, and served as a place of retreat to his queen in the winter of 1306; it is a ruin of great antiquity, and appears to have been strongly fortified, having subterraneous passages and concealments. It was distinguished by its seven towers, one of which, from the whiteness of its stones, was called the Snow Tower; these ruins cover an acre of ground.

MIDMARR parish, 15 miles from Aberdeen, is about 4½ miles in length and 4 in breadth. The Vale of Corrichie, near the southern boundary, is well known as the scene of a battle fought during the reign of Queen Mary, when the contending parties were headed by the Marquis of Huntly and the Earl of Murray. The principal eminence in this part is the Hill of Faro, which rises nearly eighteen hundred feet above the level of the sea.

TOUGH parish is 23 miles from Huntly, and 22 from Aberdeen. Several druidical temples may be seen in this district, one of which, on the hill about two miles from the church, still retains the name of the Old Kirk of Tough.

The parish of TOWIE is 23 miles from Huntly, and is watered by the Don, which flows through it from east to west. The general appearance of the country is hilly, and the eminences are mostly covered with a heath.

TULLYNESSLE and FORBES, parishes united, lie 27 miles from Aberdeen and 18 from Huntly, on the north bank of the Don. The appearance of the country is hilly, or rather mountainous; some of the hills are of considerable altitude, and game is abundant.

POST OFFICE, ALFORD, William Hay, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts at ten minutes past nine morning and seven night, and are despatched thereto at ten minutes past six morning and ten minutes before four afternoon.
Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

Post Office, FORBES, James Sheriffs, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts (from Alford) at a quarter-past ten morning and eight night, and are despatched thereto at ten minutes past three afternoon and ten night.

Post Office, KEIG, George Bruce, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts (from Whitehouse) at half-past ten morning and half-past eight night, and are despatched thereto at a quarter-past seven morning and ten minutes past three afternoon.

Post Office, Massat, KILDRUMMY, Mrs. Christie, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Aberdeen) at twelve noon, and are despatched thereto at half-past six morning.

Post Office, WHITEHOUSE, George Summers, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts (from Aberdeen) at nine morning and a quarter before seven night, and are despatched thereto at a quarter before seven and at ten morning and half-past four afternoon.

AUCHTERLESS, FORGUE, MONTQUHITTER,

CUMINESTOWN, GARMOND, INVERKEITHNY, YTHAN WELLS, BADENSCOTH AND GORDONSTOWN.

AUCHTERLESS, a parish situated about midway between Aberdeen and Banff, is about 7 miles long and 3 broad; the soil is generally productive, and is watered by the river Ythan. The vestiges of an extensive fortified camp, the enclosed area of which is computed at 120 acres, are well worthy the attention of the antiquary. BADENSCOTH and GORDONSTOWN are places in this parish.

FORGUE is a parish 9 miles in length, and its greatest breadth about 6; its situation is north-east of Huntly, and it is intersected by two rivulets—the Fendraught and the Forgue. The soil in the lower parts produces good crops, but towards the south the ground is mostly covered with heath. On several of the estates much has been done in planting and improving the wastes. The celebrated Glendronach distillery is situated in this parish, the principal partner, Mr. Scott, is also an extensive breeder of short horns.

INVERKEITHNY, a parish in the south-eastern corner of Banffshire, lies on the right, or south bank of the Deveron, along which it extends about six miles, and measures from one to four miles in breadth. Marnoch bounds it on the north, Turriff and Auchterless on the east, Forgue on the south, and Rothiemay on the west. The district is chiefly hilly.

MONTQUHITTER is a parish, extending about nine miles from north to south, and six from east to west, bounded by Turriff on the west, King Edward on the north, New Deer on the east, and Fyvie on the south. The surface is uneven and arable in the lower parts; the district was once very mossy and moorish, but has been considerably improved. The parish is watered by two small rivers; one of these discharges itself in the Ythan, and the other into the Deveron; both abound with trout. CUMINESTOWN and GARMOND are two villages in this parish.

CRATHIE,

BRAEMAR, BALMORAL AND CASTLETOWN.

CRATHIE, or Crathy, is an extensive mountainous parish, in the heart of Marr, among the Grampian mountains, incorporating the suppressed parish of BRAEMAR; jointly they comprise a territory forty miles in length and twenty in breadth, and have a population of about 1,600. This district is supposed to be more elevated above the level of the sea, and farther distant from the coast in every direction, than any other parochial section in Scotland. On some of the mountains snow may be found all the year round; Ben-Macduie, 4,300 feet in height, is among the stupendous eminences in this quarter. Nearly the whole of this district was once covered with wood, and was called the Forest of Marr, which, with those of the Duke of Athol, in Perthshire, and the Duke of Gordon, in Badenoch and Glenaven, constituted the principal part of the great Caledonian forest. In Braemar, a considerable portion of the wood still remains, which is well stocked with deer.

BALMORAL CASTLE, the highland residence of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and Abergeldie Castle, belonging to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, are in this parish, as is also Lochmuich, one of the shooting boxes of His Royal Highness. Many seats of the nobility and gentry embellish this interesting locality.

LOCHNAGAR, too, so famed for its whisky distillery, is likewise in Crathie parish. The principal lakes are Loch Callader and Loch Brotachan, which contain trout, salmon and eels. The great military road from Blairgowrie to Fort George passes the whole extent. On this line is the village of CASTLETOWN, near which are the ruins of an ancient castle, said to have been a hunting seat of King Malcolm Canmore. The village is divided by the river Cluny—the one side of the water called AUCHINDRYNE, belonging to the Earl of Fife, the other to Mr. Farquharson, of Invercauld. At a short distance from Castletown is the castle of Braemar, once garrisoned by King William, and burnt in the contest which took place between the Royal forces and the Earl of Marr; it was re-built in 1749, and till within the last few years, was occupied by government troops, to prevent the smuggling which was so frequent in this district. This part contains inexhaustible quarries of limestone and fine slate. Castletown, with a population of about 350 persons, possesses two very fine hotels, and is much resorted to in summer by tourists.

POST OFFICE, CRATHIE, Charles Thompson, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts at twelve noon, and are despatched at six morning.

CRIMOND, LONMAY, RATHEN AND ST. FERGUS.

CRIMOND is a parish lying an equal distance from the town of Fraserburgh and Peterhead, upon the coast of Buchan, with a front to the German Ocean, of about three miles in breadth, which declines to a point, inland, at the distance of rather more than five miles. Rattray Head is on the coast, a very dangerous promontory. Near the east end of the lake Strathbog is a small hill, called the Castle hill, where Comyn, Earl of Buchan, had a castle. About a hundred years ago, there was a communication between the loch of Strathbog and the sea; and a harbour at the east end, close to the castle, for small craft: in one night the mouth of the harbour was filled up by the drifting of sand, and the communication has been interrupted ever since. On this harbour formerly stood the burgh of Rattray. There is a ruin of a small chapel near the site of the old burgh of Rattray, said to have been erected by the Earl of Buchan, about the year 1260.

The parish of LONMAY has about four miles of seacoast, is ten miles long, and nearly four broad. The soil is various, but generally fertile; and in this parish, about four miles N.E. is the fishing village of ST. COMBS. A considerable branch of the river Ugie passes through the parish, which abounds in limestone.

RATHEN parish is about four miles distant from Fraserburgh, about eight miles long, at a medium of two in breadth; it possesses two creeks, on which are built the fishing villages of CAIRNBULG and INVERALLOCHY. There are two old castles in ruins in those villages, which seem to have been places of considerable strength. This parish is destitute of growing timber, though large masses of oak are occasionally dug up from morasses.

ST. FERGUS, a village and parish, though locally situate on the coast of Aberdeenshire, is in that part of the district of Buchan which belongs to the county of Banff. It is bounded on the east by the North Sea, and on the south by the small river Ugie, which separates it from Peterhead; the village is five miles distant from that town, and thirteen from Fraserburgh. The great Field-Marshall Keith, of whom a statue in bronze has been presented to the town of Peterhead by King William I. of Prussia, was born in 1696, at Inverugie Castle, the ruins of which, in a bend of the river, still attract the notice of the traveller.

POST OFFICE, CRIMOND, William Pirie, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts at twenty-five minutes past one afternoon, and five minutes past six evening; and are despatched thereto at twenty-five minutes past three, and fifteen minutes past six evening.
The nearest Money Order Office is at LONMAY.

Post Office, LONMAY, James Forrest, Post Master.—Letters arrive from Fraserburgh and the North at fifteen minutes past seven morning, and fifteen minutes before six evening; from Aberdeen and the South at fifteen minutes past ten morning, and twenty-six minutes past four afternoon; and are despatched to the North at thirty-five minutes past eight morning, and to Peterhead, Aberdeen and the South at fifteen minutes past seven morning, and fifteen minutes before six evening.
Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

ECHT,

DRUMOAK, KINNELLAR, BLACKBURN, NEWHILLS, AUCHMILL, PETERCULTER AND SKENE.

ECHT, a parish 12 miles w. of Aberdeen, is about five miles in length and the same in breadth: it is a hilly district, but having a large proportion of the land under cultivation. In this parish is Dunecht House, the property of the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, the present residence of Lord Lindsay. Fairs are held on the first Monday in every month, with the following exceptions—the second Monday in May, the day before Michael fair, in October, and the second Tuesday in November.

DRUMOAK parish is chiefly in Aberdeenshire, having a small portion in Kincardineshire. It is about four miles long, and about the same in breadth. The surface is hilly, a great part being fit only for sheep pasture, while the arable land is shallow and produces but moderate crops. There are two stations here on the Dee Side line. The tower of Drum is a very ancient edifice.

KINNELLAR is a small parish, on the south side of the Don, on the Inverness road, distant from Aberdeen about eight miles and a half; and comprises an irregular assemblage of hills of considerable elevation, the summits of which are covered with small plantations of firs. The village of BLACKBURN is in this parish.

NEWHILLS parish is of an irregular hexagonal form, six miles and a half in diameter, distant from Aberdeen five miles, the river Don forming its boundary on the north-east. The general appearance of the country is hilly, and towards the west becomes mountainous. In this parish are the extensive paper mills of Messrs. Alexander Pirie and Sons, and Messrs. Chas. Davidson and Sons, of Mugiemoss Mills, and three corn mills.

PETERCULTER parish is about eight miles in length, and six in breadth; the surface is rugged and uneven, with hills and valleys, rocky eminences and marshy flats interspersed. On the banks of the Dee, and its tributary streams, however, the soil is tolerably fertile. On the summit of the hills of Oldtown are the remains of a rectangular encampment. The Dee Side Railway Company have three stations in the parish. In this parish are paper mills belonging to the Culter Mills Paper Co. Limited, and the woollen manufactory of Mr. George Stewart.

SKENE parish is about eight miles from Aberdeen, the same number of miles in length, and four at its extreme breadth. On the south is the Luchar burn, a tributary stream of the Dee, issuing from Loch Skene, a small lake; and in a north-west direction thence is Skene House, belonging to the Earl of Fife, an elegant country residence, surrounded by some thriving plantations. In this parish is an extensive spinning and carding mill, worked by Messrs. Alexander Hadden and Sons. These gentlemen have benevolently founded a very excellent school. For the churches of these several parishes, and their ministers—see places of worship. A fair is held on the Tuesday before Easter.

POST OFFICE, ECHT, James Coutts, Post Master.—Letters arrive (from Aberdeen) at a quarter-past eight morning, and are despatched thereto at ten morning.

Post Office, BLACKBURN, Mary Scott, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive (from Aberdeen) at twenty minutes past eight morning, and half-past two afternoon; and are despatched thereto at a quarter to seven morning, and twenty minutes before one afternoon.

Post Office, DRUMOAK, Elizabeth Craigmile, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive from all parts at half-past eight morning, and twenty minutes before six evening; and are despatched thereto at ten minutes past nine morning, and half-past six evening.

Post Office, NEWHILLS, James M. Chivas, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts at seven morning, and a quarter before one afternoon; and are despatched thereto at a quarter-past eleven morning, and twenty minutes past two afternoon.

Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

Post Office, PETERCULTER, Margaret Thomson, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive (from Aberdeen) at ten minutes past eight morning, and half-past five evening; and are despatched thereto at nine minutes past seven morning, half-past two afternoon, and ten minutes past eight evening.

Post Office, SKENE, Robert Grant, Post Master.—Letters arrive (from Aberdeen) at half-past seven morning, and are despatched thereto at two afternoon.

ELLON, BELHELVIE, CRUDEN, FOVERAN, NEWBURGH,

AND LOGIE BUCHAN.

ELLON parish extends about nine miles in length from north to south, and five in breadth; the surface is uneven, and there are some rising grounds, the heights of which are considerable. The village of Ellon is about 16 miles N.E. from Aberdeen, pleasantly situated on the Ythan, which is crossed here by a handsome bridge. Upon the river, which is navigable for large boats, within half a mile of the village, a trade in coal and corn is carried on of some importance; and the monetary affairs of the district are facilitated by three highly respectable banking establishments—they are branches, respectively, of the Union Bank of Scotland, the Aberdeen Town and County Bank, and the North of Scotland Bank. Ellon was not at one time an insignificant village, but the assize town of a populous district—the scene of penal trial, the doomsman's place of execution, and the scene of mortal combat. There are several new and handsome buildings being erected in the village, and the present proprietor is giving every encouragement in the way of feus, and for which there are several very eligible sites. It has many attractions, and therefore, in the summer season, there are many visitors, who find excellent accommodation at the New Inn. The trout fishing on the Ythan has long been celebrated, as also the pearls, which are found in that river, one of which is the great pearl in the Crown of Scotland.

The places of worship are Established and Free churches, and others for United Presbyterians and Episcopal congregations. A fine Episcopal church, called St. Mary, from designs by Mr. G. E. Street, of London, has been erected and opened. There are several public schools in the parish. The market is held on the first and third Mondays in each month, also on Tuesday after the 11th of May, and on the Wednesday after the 12th of November.

BELHELVIE is a coast parish in the district of Formartine, eight miles from Aberdeen. The aspect of the country is very unfavourable, especially at a distance from the sea-coast, where it exhibits nothing but heath and stones; towards the sea, however, there is some arable land.

CRUDEN parish lies on the east of Buchan district, and extends from eight to nine miles along the shore, and about seven miles inland. The soil is various; a large proportion being a deep rich clay, while the remainder is light and gravelly, with some mosses. Slains Castle, the seat of the Earl of Erroll, a large edifice on a precipice overhanging the sea, and the celebrated "Buller of Buchan," are in this parish; the latter is a large rocky cavern, open to the sky, into which the sea rushes through a natural archway. The rocks are probably one hundred feet in height, both to the interior of "The Pot" and also on their sea front. It is scarcely possible to overstate the impressing magnificence of these granite sea walls.

The parish of FOVERAN extends four miles in length from east to west, and about two in breadth; distant from Aberdeen ten miles, and from Belhelvie two. Its general appearance is level, but the ground rises by a gradual ascent from the sea, though not to any considerable height. The soil varies from sand to a rich loam and strong clay, the whole of which is arable. The Ythan, navigable for about three miles, forms the boundary of the north. At the mouth of the river is the small village of NEWBURGH, in which a considerable trade is carried on in grain, lime, bones and guano. In this parish are to be seen the ruins of several ancient castles and chapels.

LOGIE BUCHAN parish is over nine miles in length, but does not average one mile in breadth; it is thirteen miles from Aberdeen, the turnpike road crossing the parish between two and three miles from Ellon, and again four miles north of Ellon. It is divided into two parts by the river Ythan, to the right of which stands the parish kirk. The surface of the country is tolerably level, and presents capabilities of cultivation, the soil being in general fertile. The Ythan is navigable with the tide for boats, to the extent of four miles up the country, which is of material advantage to the agriculturists, by supplying them with lime, &c.

FRASERBURGH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

FRASERBURGH is a respectable and flourishing seaport town and burgh of regality, in a parish of that name, 151 miles N.E. of Edinburgh, 42 N. of Aberdeen, 22. E of Banff (23 by the new road), and 18 N.W. from Peterhead; situated on the south side of Kinnaird Head, a bold promontory, surmounted by a light-house, which is one of the oldest under the Commissioners of Northern Lights; it is built upon the site of a very ancient castle, which was about 500 years ago occupied by the Saltoun family. The parish occupies the north-eastern angle of land in this part of the county, and extends about three miles and a half each way, containing 7,000 acres, of which 6,914 are arable. At one time the name of the parish was PHILORTH, and the possessions of Lord Saltoun here retain this appellation. In the middle of the 16th century, a town was erected upon the estate of Sir Alexander Fraser, of Philorth, which, from the name of the proprietor or superior, was called Fraserburgh. The charter of erection is dated February 13th, 1613, by which considerable powers are vested in the proprietor. The town is neatly built, forming a square, is well supplied with water, and the streets, which are tolerably spacious, are lighted with gas by a company. Near the centre are the town-house and a cross—the latter of modern date. A sheriff's small debt court is held quarterly in the town-house. Lord Saltoun is hereditary provost. His lordship voluntarily offered, some years ago, to relinquish his rights as hereditary provost in favour of the inhabitants, but the difficulty and expense of obtaining an act of parliament for this transfer prevented this being carried into effect. His lordship, with a baron, baillie and twelve councillors regulate the affairs of the burgh. Sir Alexander Anderson (late Lord Provost of Aberdeen), has succeeded Lewis Chalmers, Esq., advocate, as Lord Saltoun's commissioner. There is an excellent harbour, which has been much improved under powers granted by an act of parliament of 2 and 3 Victoria, cap. 65. It is managed by the magistrates, the town council, and five feuars, who are appointed commissioners for executing the act. A new harbour has been constructed, containing an area of eight acres, and affording a berthage of 2,110 feet, but making, with the former berthing, an aggregate of 5,010 feet. In connection with the harbour is a patent slip, capable of carrying vessels of 400 tons burthen, and which is found to be of great utility. Contiguous to the harbour is a tolerable road for shipping, in a bay nearly three miles in length and upwards of one in breadth, with a good anchorage ground: the creek of Fraserburgh is within the port of Peterhead. A herring fishery, with excellent accommodation for curing, has been established here upwards of half a century, and is now one of the most successful stations on the east coast of Scotland. The average number of boats employed in this fishery is between six and seven hundred. The principal exports are herrings and other fish, grain, potatoes, and butter; also fat cattle for the London market.

The places of worship are two churches of the Establishment, a Free church, a Scotch Episcopal chapel, one for Independents, one belonging to the Evangelical Union, one for the United Presbyterians, and one for the Baptists. The educational requirements are supplied by the Fraserburgh academy, which was built at a cost of £2,500, and endowed by James Park, Esq., and opened in 1870, two public schools erected at a cost of £5,000, one belonging to the Episcopalians, and several respectable private schools in the parish. There is also a school which was instituted in 1863, by Miss Strachan, of Cortes, in memory of her brother, James Strachan, Esq., M.D., Inspector General of Army Hospitals, Madras. On the 1st May, 1865, the Fraserburgh extension of the Formartine and Buchan Railway was opened, and has greatly added to the interests of the town. There is a first-class hotel here called the "Saltoun Arms Hotel," in which will be found every convenience. The markets, chiefly for corn, are held on Tuesdays and Fridays. Population of the burgh in 1871 was, 4,271; and of the whole parish, 5,301.

FYVIE,

METHLICK, MEIKLEFOLLA, WOODHEAD, MILLBREX AND ROTHIENORMAN.

FYVIE is an inland parish on the high road from Aberdeen to Banff, 7 miles from Meldrum and 25 from Aberdeen, lying on both sides the river Ythan, which, between Fyvie and Methlick, flows through a romantic wooded gorge called the Braes of Gight. Fyvie Castle, the seat of Colonel W. C. Gordon, stands in a delightful situation; it is among the first specimens of Gothic architecture, and has been repaired and greatly improved. The scenery around is highly pleasing, and a beautiful loch intersects the grounds. Near the church, on the banks of the river, are the ruins of a priory, founded along with the parish church, in honour of the Virgin Mary, by Fergus, Earl of Buchan, in 1179, and was given to the abbey of Arbroath. The places of worship in the parish are Established and Free churches—one each, and two Episcopal chapels, respectively situated at the villages of WOODHEAD and MEIKLEFOLLA, and one Mission church in connection with the Establishment. At MILLBREX is a chapel of ease under the Establishment. Cattle markets are held at Fyvie station on the third Thursday in every month. ROTHIENORMAN is a place in this parish.

METHLICK parish, about 22 miles from Aberdeen, is bounded by Fyvie on the west, New Deer on the north, Savoch and Ellen on the east, and Tarves on the south: it extends nine miles in length, by upwards of four in breadth. The district is intersected throughout its extent, from the north-west to the south-east, by the river Ythan, on the banks of which there now appear some thriving and decorative plantations. The village is neat and rural; close to it the river is crossed by a handsome iron bridge. There are two churches in the parish, one Free, the other under the Establishment. About two miles from the village is Haddo House, a seat of the Earl of Aberdeen. Fairs are held in the village on the first Thursday after the 5th of May, and the first Wednesday after the 18th of November.

POST OFFICE, FYVIE, Alexander Stephen, Post Master.—Letters arrive from the North at half-past seven morning, and are despatched thereto at fifteen minutes past nine morning; from Aberdeen and the South at ten minutes past nine morning and one noon, and are despatched thereto at half-past six morning and half-past four afternoon.

Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

Post Office, METHLICK, Alexander Smith, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (via mail gig from Aberdeen) at ten minutes past eight morning, and are despatched thereto at five minutes before twelve noon.

Telegraph Office.

 All Money Orders for METHLICK should be made payable at ABERDEEN.

Post Office, ROTHIENORMAN, William Beverley, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at half-past nine morning and half-past twelve noon, and are despatched at seven morning and forty minutes past four afternoon.

The nearest Money Order Office is at FYVIE, four miles distant.

GARIOCH,

CLUNY, CULSALMOND, DAVIOT, INSCH, KEMNAY, LESLIE, MONYMUSK, OYNE, PITCAPLE, PREMNAY, RAYNE AND THEIR NEIGHBOURHOODS.

GARIOCH, CHAPEL OF GARIOCH, or LOGIE-DURNO, is a district and parish lying in the centre of the county, 20 miles from Aberdeen, 18 from Huntly, and 5 from Inverurie. It is 8 miles in length and 12 in breadth—the river Don dividing it on the south from Kemnay. The castle of Balquhine, now in ruins, in this parish, is famed for an echo, supposed to be the finest in Scotland. In this district was fought the battle of Harlaw, in 1411, between Alexander, Earl of Marr, and Donald, Earl of the Isles. Buchan relates that the number of nobility who fell in this obstinately contested action was greater than had fallen in any foreign engagement for many years before.

CLUNY parish is in the district of Kincardine-O'Neil, situated between the Dee and the Don waters, distant from Aberdeen 18 miles, and from Inverurie 9. In length it is about 10 miles, and in breadth from 2 to 3. Four-fifths of this parish are under cultivation. There are three druidical temples and several cairns of great size in this district, besides two large castles—Castle Cluny and Castle Fraser, both erected in the beginning of the 15th century. The castle of Cluny has still a double barred iron gate, with massive iron bolts. This is said to have the birthplace of the "Admirable Crighton."

CULSALMOND parish is distant from Huntly 10 miles and from Aberdeen 28. This is one of the most fertile parishes in the shire, having a flat surface intersected with thriving plantations. Newton House is the principal residence in this parish, which extends about three miles both in breadth and length. An annual fair is held at ST. SAIRS on Wednesday after last Tuesday in June (old style.)

DAVIOT, a parish in the district of Garioch, is 21 miles N.W. from Aberdeen and 5 miles from Inverurie, and is about 5 miles in length by 4 in breadth; the surface is level, and has a south-eastern exposure. It has two druidical temples, one of which forms part of the churchyard. The land is now enclosed and very productive. The small village of DAVIOT contains a church of the Establishment, and a school belonging to it.

INSCH is a burgh of barony in the before-mentioned district, 27 miles from Aberdeen. The parish extends 5 miles in length by 3 in breadth, and is bounded by Culsalmond on the east, Kinnethmont on the west, and separated by the water of Urie from Drumblade and Forgue. The burgh and village is lighted with gas, supports three banking establishments and a savings bank, and there are two churches with schools in connection. On the top of the hill of Dun-o'-Deer are the ruins of an old castle, said to have been erected by King Gregory the Great. In the most elevated part of the hill of Foudland, within this parish, are extensive quarries of fine blue slate. Markets are held monthly.

KEMNAY parish, four miles and a half in length, and three in breadth, is distant from Aberdeen 15 miles, and from Inverurie 5. The House of Kemnay is delightfully situated on the banks of the Don, and surrounded with a park and pleasure grounds, laid out with great taste.

LESLIE, a parish in the district of Garioch, comprehends a superficies of four square miles; it is watered by the small river Gadie—a stream celebrated by Arthur Johnston in his elegant Latin poems. In several places towards the south there is found a species of greenish coloured amianthus, which is easily cut, and formed by the common people into snuff-boxes and other trinkets, which have a very beautiful appearance. Several remains of druidical temples, cairns and an ancient encampment, are pointed out. In the parish is a church of the Establishment, a Free church and a Congregational chapel.

MONYMUSK parish is about seven miles long, and from four to five broad, and is distant from Inverurie eight miles. Monymusk House, the seat of the Grant family, is an elegant building on the right bank of the Don, environed by fine plantations. The village is well built, in form of a square, with the church in the centre, and the houses being constructed of granite, the place altogether has a remarkably neat and clean aspect. A market fair is held annually on the 29th of August.

OYNE, a parish likewise in Garioch district, is of an irregular figure, stretching about six miles in length, by from two to three in breadth; it is mostly of a fertile and cheering aspect. Aberdeen is about 25 miles distant, and Huntly 14. In this parish may be seen the ruins of an old castle, which tradition states to have belonged at one time to the family of Leith.

PREMNAY parish is 24 miles from Aberdeen, and extends four miles in length, by from one to two in breadth. It is bounded by Insch on the north, Oyne on the east, Tough and Keig on the south, and lies on the north side of the hill of Bennochie. The land is chiefly arable, and the greater part of it is enclosed.

RAYNE parish lies on the left bank of the Urie, betwixt Culsalmond on the north-west, and Daviot and the Chapel of Garioch on the south-east; it extends about four and a half miles from the Urie, by a breadth of from two to four miles. Except a small eminence, covered with heath, on the north side of the parish, the surface is flat, with a few rising spots on the banks of the Urie. The district on the whole has a pleasing appearance and is ornamented by plantations. In the central part of the parish stands the village of Rayne, and on the public road, along the Urie, is the little post village of OLD RAYNE, distant 24 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and 9 from Inverurie; it is in Rayne that the church is situated. An annual fair is held on the second Wednesday in August, and markets are held at Meikle Wartle on the Thursdays before the 26th May and 22nd November.

PITCAPLE is a station on the Great North of Scotland line, and contains a church under the Establishment and a branch of the Aberdeen Town and County Bank. Pitcaple Castle is the seat of Henry Lumsden, Esq.

GLENMUICK,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF GLENGAIRN, TULLICH, BALLATER, PANNANICH WELLS, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

GLENMUICK is a large parish in the district of Marr, formed by the union of the parishes of Glenmuick, Tuilich and Glengairn. It lies about 40 miles w. of Aberdeen, is about 18 miles in length, and 15 in breadth, intersected by the Dee and several of its tributary streams. The soil is shallow and early, producing good grain; the hills are of considerable elevation, and many of them covered with wood to the very summits. Specimens of lead ore have been found near the castle of Glengairn, and limestone is everywhere abundant. The parish of Glenmuick has a population of about 2,200.

In the village of TULLICH are seen the remains of an old kirk, the walls of which enclose the burial-place of the Farquharsons of Whitehouse. The view from this spot, looking towards the west, is much admired, and presents a series of hills rising one above another, with the lofty Lochnagar towering over all.

In this parish (Glenmuick) is the agreeable and quiet village of BALLATER, much resorted to in the summer by tourists, on account of the scenery around, which combines both the picturesque and the grand. The neighbourhood is also occasionally honoured by the presence of royalty—Balmoral Castle being at no great distance; and his royal highness the Prince of Wales having two shooting boxes, Birk Hall and Gairnshells, in this vicinity. The ruins of Knock Castle are ornamental to the scenery at one point, and the country is studied with many seats of the gentry. Loch Cannor, or Kan, a lake, is in this neighbourhood; on a small island within it are the ruins of a castle, said to have been once a hunting seat of Malcolm Canmore. The lake is beautiful and romantic in its features, and skirted with birch, hazel and other woods. Speaking of this district, indeed, it may be pronounced one of the most interesting in Aberdeenshire. The village of Ballater is small, but regularly formed—the church standing near to its centre. Several houses have been erected expressly for the reception of visitors, and additional accommodation is found in a very superior hotel—the "Invercauld Arms"—containing every convenience that may be desired, either by families or commercial gentlemen. The Great North of Scotland railway line from Aboyne terminates here. A military barracks, to accommodate about 70 men, was erected here in 1870. The population is about 700.

The mineral wells and baths at PANNANICH are within about two miles of Ballater, on the banks of the Dee. The waters are highly serviceable in cases of scrofula and dyspepsia, and in all complaints where the blood is either deficient in quantity or vitiated in quality; they have also proved beneficial in cases of stone and gravel. The increasing demand for accommodation evinces that the wells are justly rising in public estimation. There is a good hotel adjacent to the wells.

Fairs are held at Ballater on the first Tuesday in May, and the second Monday and Tuesday in September (o.s.), and on the Saturday previous to the 22nd November (N.S.).

POST OFFICE, BALLATER, Elizabeth Farquharson, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive from all parts at ten minutes past ten morning, fifty minutes past one afternoon and fifteen minutes past seven evening, and are despatched at half-past seven morning, half-past twelve afternoon and half-past six evening.

Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

HUNTLY,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF CAIRNEY, GLASS, DRUMBLADE, GARTLY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HUNTLY, a burgh of barony and seat of a presbytery, is a pleasing and modern town, the capital of the parish of that name; 123 miles N. of Edinburgh, 63 N. of Inverness, 38 N. of Aberdeen, 21 S.W. of Banff, and 18 S.E. of Fochabers. The parish is about 10 miles in length and 4 in breadth, formed by the annexation of the parishes of Dunbennan and Kinnoir. Perhaps there is no part of the county in which agriculture has achieved more success than in this parish. A few years ago the general surface was anything but productive, but, through systematic culture and perseverance, it has been wonderfully enriched, and now, for production and quality, is inferior to none in the North of Scotland. The acreage of arable land is very considerable, and some of the eminences are clothed with fine plantations. The district is watered by the Bogie and the Deveron. St. Mungo's hill, in the district of Kinnoir, has the appearance of a volcano, and on the summit there is an opening, which is generally filled with water, though in dry seasons peat is obtained from it, strongly impregnated with sulphur, and pieces of lava, it is said, have been found round it. Limestone, some of which approaches to the nature of marble, and takes a very high polish, is obtained in the parish. The town, which is well lighted with gas by a joint-stock company, is in a dry and salubrious situation, on the point of land formed by the confluence of the Bogie with the Deveron, the stream of each being crossed by a handsome bridge; it is neatly built—having two principal streets, crossing each other at right angles, and forming a spacious square for the market-place. The Duke of Richmond, who is superior, appoints a baron baillie. Justice courts are held as occasions require, and a sheriff's small debts court quarterly—the jurisdiction of the latter extends over twelve parishes. Huntly is a station on the Great North of Scotland Railway. A constant supply of manures, coals, &c., and facility for the transmission of agricultural produce, are amongst the advantages which this line affords the town and neighbourhood. This town was once famed for the weaving of fine linen, introduced by an Irish manufacturer in the year 1768, and the quantity annually manufactured used to amount to £30,000 or £40,000, but during and since the time of the Continental war, this branch of industry has gradually decreased. It is now a place of no particular manufacture, and the trade is merely local and domestic.

There are, besides the parish and Free churches, several other places of worship in Huntly and its vicinage—these include temples for the worship of various religious denominations—of which a list with there officiating ministers is appended; among them is a handsome Roman Catholic chapel. Several public and charitable educational establishments are well sustained, and conducted with ability. The Gordon schools—opened in 1841—were founded by her late Grace of that title in 1839, and are situated near to the Lodge—formerly the residence of the lady. The school premises, which are handsome and fitted in every convenient way for their purpose, comprise four departments—viz. the parochial school, the school of the Free church, the industrial school, and one for infants; the teachers of the two latter classes have residences in the establishment. A home for the aged, founded and endowed by the late Alexander Scott, Esq. of Craibstone House, affords an asylum for the aged destitute of both sexes.

Markets for cattle are held on the first and third Wednesday of every month. A sheep fair is likewise held on the Thursday before the second Tuesday in August (o.s.). Feeing markets for hiring servants are held on the Wednesday before the 26th May, the second Thursday in July, and the Thursday before the 2nd November.

CAIRNEY is a tolerably extensive parish, contiguous to that of Huntly, lying chiefly in the county of Banff. The land for the most part is mountainous, but much of it is, notwithstanding, in a high state of cultivation, and bears prolific crops.

The parish of GLASS is likewise adjacent to that of Huntly on the west, and is also in both counties, lying on either side of the river Deveron.

DRUMBLADE parish extends from five to six miles in length and from four to five in breadth. There are three tumuli, near one of which are the remains of an encampment of King Robert Bruce, after he had defeated Comyn, Earl of Buchan, near the burgh of Inverurie. The soil is generally fertile and the surface greatly diversified.

The parish of GARTLY, partly in Aberdeenshire and partly in Banffshire, is of an irregular oval figure, extending about twelve miles in length by six in breadth. The Duke of Richmond is sole proprietor of this extensive tract. An excellent quarry of blue slate is in the parish, and the hills afford peat in abundance. Improvements in agriculture have been actively progressing for some years past.

POST OFFICE, The Square, HUNTLY, John Porter, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts South at fifty-six minutes past eight morning, fifty-three minutes past twelve noon, and three afternoon, and are despatched at five minutes to nine morning, ten minutes to one afternoon, and half-past seven evening.

Letters arrive from the North at five minutes to ten morning and thirty-five minutes past one afternoon, and are despatched thereto at ten minutes to seven morning, a quarter to ten morning, and twenty-five minutes to two afternoon. There is a Bag from Aberdeen every Saturday night at seven.

Letters arrive on Sunday (by Mail Gig from Keith) at half-past five evening, and are despatched at twenty minutes past seven morning.

Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

Sub-Post Office, GARTLY, John Dallas, Post Master.—Letters arrive from the South at a quarter before nine morning, and twenty minutes to one afternoon (on Saturday half-past six evening), and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes to ten morning and half-past four evening. Letters arrive from the North at twenty-four minutes to ten morning, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes to nine morning and twenty minutes to one afternoon.

INVERURIE,

KEITH HALL, PORT ELPHINSTONE, KINMUICK, KINKELL, KINTORE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INVERURIE is a parish lying at the termination of the peninsula, between the river Urie on the north, and the Don on the south. The town, which is a royal burgh, is 16 miles N.W. of Aberdeen, 22 S.W. of Huntly, and 5 W. by S. of Old Meldrum; pleasantly situated on the neck of land formed by the confluence of the streams before mentioned. Tradition reports that Inverurie was erected into a royal burgh by King Robert Bruce on the occasion of a signal victory obtained by him in the neighbourhood, over Comyn, Earl of Buchan, the King of England's general in Scotland. The oldest charter is a novodamus by Queen Mary, the preamble of which states that Inverurie had been a royal burgh from time immemorial, but that the charter of its erection had been lost during the civil wars. The town is now governed by a provost, three baillies, a treasurer, and four councillors; and it joins with Kintore, Peterhead, Banff, Cullen and Elgin in sending a member to parliament. Inverurie confers the title of baron on the Earl of Kintore, who has a fine mansion—the grounds of which are at stated times open to the public—a little to the east of the town. By means of the influence, and under the patronage of this noble family, a bridge was erected in 1791 over the Don, at the expense of £2,000, and subsequently another was carried over the Urie. The base of Inverurie, a conical mount, 50 or 60 feet high, overhangs the isolated churchyard, situated near it. The base appears to have been the site of the chief castle of the Earls Garioch, as early as about the year 1200. The field in which it stands is still called the castle yards of Inverurie. A sheriff's circuit small debt court is held here in the months of March, June, September and December. The Aberdeen Town and County, the North of Scotland, the City of Glasgow and the Union Banking Companies have each a very respectable branch establishment here. There is also a Savings Bank. Inverurie has become a favourite resort during the summer months—the Don and the Urie affording ample sport to the angler. The Kintore Arms Hotel is replete with comfort. It has hot, cold and shower baths, and a choice library for the use of visitors. The opening of the Great North of Scotland Railway from Aberdeen to Inverness, which has a respectable station here, and a branch line to Old Meldrum, gave a new stimulus to industry, and the town, which is well lighted with gas, has a respectable and thriving appearance. Arrangements having been made for supplying Inverurie with water, the first sod of a new waterworks was cut in 1876, by Lady Madeline Dora Keith Falconer, eldest daughter of the Earl of Kintore, in the grounds of Keith Hall House. The water is to be obtained from the Earl's lands. The tan works of Mr. Davidson are on an extensive scale, and at the contiguous village of PORT ELPHINSTONE are established meal and paper mills, and a brewery; here also have been erected several respectable residences, and a subscription school opened.

The places of worship in the parish are Established and Free churches, Episcopalian, Independent and Methodist chapels, and a handsome Roman Catholic chapel. A new Free church is now (1876) in course of erection, on the left hand side of West High street, the foundation stone of which was laid by the Earl of Kintore. The building, which is in the early English Gothic style, consists of ground floor and gallery, and will accommodate about 800 persons. The principal entrance is from the north end, and the length of the building inside is 68 feet by 44½ feet in breadth. On the north-east corner of the church there is to be a tower and spire with ornamental finial, the height of which will be about 107 feet. A free school, under the management of the office bearers of the Free church, is respectably attended. A school, called William Clark's, or Burgh Muir Free School, has been recently erected, and is well attended. It is placed under the management of the magistrates.

Markets are held every third week:—Tuesday, 11th January; Tuesday, 1st February (feeing market); Tuesday, 22nd February; Tuesday, 14th March; Tuesday, 4th April; Tuesday, 25th April; Tuesday, 16th May; Wednesday, 24th May (feeing market); Tuesday, 6th June; Tuesday, 27th June; Tuesday, 11th July (day before St. Sairs); Tuesday, 18th July; Tuesday, 8th August (feeing market); Tuesday, 29th August; Tuesday, 19th September; Tuesday, 10th October; Tuesday, 31st October; Tuesday, 21st November (cattle and feeing market); Thursday, 7th December (Christmas market); and Tuesday, 12th December. The markets from 1st April to the end of September to be held on the Market Stance, North street, and from 1st October to the end of March in Market place.

KINTORE is likewise a royal burgh, and the capital of its parish. The town, which is small, is between 3 and 4 miles S.E. from Inverurie, situated on the public road near the Don. The burgh is governed by a provost, two baillies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer, assisted by a council of eight other burgesses; and it is, as before stated, a contributary burgh in returning a member to parliament. In this parish are numerous cairns and tumuli, which are said to point out the position where Robert Bruce overtook and destroyed the army of Edward I. after the defeat of Comyn, Earl of Buchan, near Inverurie; and within the parish is Hall Forest Castle, formerly a hunting seat of King Robert, now the property of the Earl of Kintore, to whom three-fourths of the parish belongs. Two churches, respectively of the Establishment and Free, with schools in connection, are in the parish. The North of Scotland Banking Company have here a branch establishment. Markets are held 20th January, 17th February, 23rd March, 11th May, 27th July, 11th November, and the 6th December.

KEITH HALL and KINKELL form a united parish, in the district of Garioch, lying on the left banks of the Urie and Don, which rivers unite opposite its centre. The parish is hilly but not mountainous, the western part is tolerably fertile and produces good crops, but the eastern is much less fruitful. It is recorded that many who fell in the battle of Harlaw were buried at Kinkell which, at that period, was the principal church in this part of the country. The Earl of Kintore has a seat in this parish.

At KINMUICK—KEITH HALL—the Society of Friends established themselves about the year 1662. The present meeting-house was probably built about 1681, and formerly contained accommodation for a school and residence for the master. It has recently been improved, and contains a free library with many ancient and modern works, illustrative of the history and doctrines of the society. Their burial-ground is near it—on the opposite side of the road.

KINCARDINE-O'NEIL, CHARLESTOWN OF ABOYNE

AND GLENTANNER, BIRSE AND LUMPHANNAN.

KINCARDINE-O'NEIL, a parish and village—the latter, the seat of a presbytery, is situated on the public road and the banks of the Dee, between Aberdeen and Ballater, 26 miles from the former, 16 from the latter, and 24 from Stonehaven. St. Erchaus well, whose waters are said to be of a medicinal character, is situated near this village. At TORPHINS, in this parish, is a station on the Dee Side Railway, about 3 miles from Kincardine-O'Neil. Dess station is about two miles from Kincardine, and in the neighbouring parish of Aboyne. The buildings which principally surround the church, command an extensive prospect up the river, towards the Grampian mountains, and the place is much resorted to for the summer retirement of invalids. In early days Kincardine was of some note, for it is upon record that a wooden bridge was built across the Dee 600 years ago, the expense of which was defrayed by a knight called Allan Durward. The parish, which is about seven miles in length by six in extreme breadth, is partly hilly and pastoral and partly arable, while in some places are thriving plantations. The greater proportion of the inhabitants are occupied in agriculture, and others are employed by the manufacturers of Aberdeen in knitting worsted stockings. The village contains three very good inns.

Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May and on the Wednesday and Thursday after the last Tuesday in August (o.s.) Markets are also held at TORPHINS in February, March, June and December.

CHARLESTOWN, or CHARLESTOWN OF ABOYNE, now generally called ABOYNE, is a small village in the parish of Aboyne, district of Mar, 4 miles from Kincardine, 4 from Glentanner, and 11 from Ballater, situated on the north bank of the Dee. The parish is united to that of Glentanner, and is watered by the river just named, and likewise by the Tanner and the Allachy, which during heavy rains become impetuous streams. The forest of Glentanner is extensive, and contains some large timber. The Dee here is crossed by a very handsome suspension bridge, built at the sole expense of the Marquis of Huntly in 1830, and re-erected by the County Road Trustees in 1871, whose seat, Aboyne Castle, ornaments this locality. In the grounds of the castle is a remarkable stone, shaped like a coffin, with a cross cut upon it. LOCH KINORD is situated about 4 miles from Aboyne. It contains some small islands, on one of which there is said to have been a castle built by Malcolm Canmore, and in it have been found articles of antiquity, among them an old axe, a canoe, and a bronze pot. A public library and reading room has lately been erected in Aboyne.

Fairs are held at Aboyne on the third Thursday in January, March, May, August, September and December; second Wednesday in April, last Wednesday in June, the Friday after Aiky fair in July, first Tuesday and Wednesday in October (old style), and second Wednesday in November.

BIRSE, the most southern parish of Aberdeenshire, lies on the south bank of the river Dee, and forms nearly a square of ten miles. There are three districts in the parish, enclosed by the same number of ridges of hills, which take a south-westerly direction towards the Grampians from the river Dee; in the valleys formed by these ridges run two streams of water—the Feuch and the Chattie. The proportion of uncultivated land is very considerable, but the old system of agriculture is giving way to modern improvements. The road from Dundee to Inverness passes through this parish. Large upright stones, cairns and other monuments of antiquity are frequently met with, as is limestone in abundance. The parish church is distant about 28 miles from Aberdeen. The manse of the Free church was erected in 1844, the church itself being built in 1843. In the parish of Birse are the remains of two ancient encampments.

LUMPHANNAN parish lies to the north-west of the village of Kincardine-O'Neil, and is about six miles in length and four in breadth, and is nearly surrounded by hills. The name signifies "the bare little valley," but this designation is not in the present day applicable to the lowlands, which are now well cultivated and fruitful. This is the district in which the usurper Macbeth is said to have been slain by Macduff, in the year 1057; the spot on which tradition asserts the combat to have taken place is about a mile north from the kirk, on the brow of a hill, where a large cairn of stones (in the midst of which a stone coffin was found some time ago) has been raised commemorative of the event, and corroborative of the finale of Shakespeare's drama.

NEW AND OLD DEER,

FETTERANGUS, LONGSIDE, MINTLAW, NEW MAUD, STEWARTFIELD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEW DEER parish lies almost in the centre of Buchan district, and extends fourteen miles from north to south, and about seven in breadth. At NEW MAUD, about 3 miles from New Deer, is a railway station, and there are also stations at OLD DEER, MINTLAW and LONGSIDE. The church, a neat edifice, and the village, which is tolerably well built, are situated about 30 miles north from Aberdeen. About two miles from the church stands an old castle, called Feddorate, which appears to have been a place of considerable strength. There are a few remains of Druidical temples, and several tumuli—these, having been opened, were found to contain urns, enclosed in stone coffins. Three miles from New Deer is Brucklay Castle, built in the year 1540, the seat of the late Captain William Dingwall Fordyce, J.P. and M.P. The situation of the castle is most romantic, and the scenery delightful: the lawns are tastefully laid out, and the park is beautified and encircled by the waters of the Ugie. Within the last few years many parts of the castle have been re-built, adding greatly to its beauty. Fairs are held on the third Wednesday in January, Wednesday after the 12th of April, Thursday before 26th, or 26th if Thursday of May, Wednesday after 19th of June, second Tuesday in August, Wednesday after 19th of October, and Thursday before 22nd, or 22nd if Thursday of November. Population of the entire parish in 1871 4,853.

OLD DEER parish is ten miles in length, by a mean breadth of between five and six. Like New Deer it lies in the district of Buchan, and contiguous to the former parish; but the village is situated some five or six miles distant, 10½ west from Peterhead and 30 north from Aberdeen by the Mintlaw road. This parish also contains the village of FETTERANGUS, about three miles from the village of Old Deer, in the county of Banff, and also the village of STEWARTFIELD, which is only one mile from Old Deer. One branch of the river Ugie intersects the parish about its centre, whilst another branch enters it for a short course on the north; upon these streams are several mills. The abbey of Deer, which stands about a mile from the village, was built in the beginning of the 13th century, by William Comyn, Earl of Buchan; it is mostly in ruins, but there is still enough remaining to show what it originally was. There were at one time no less than twelve Druidical temples, of which four, tolerably entire, are yet remaining. The Druids' temple at Biffie is the most conspicuous, and is an object of great attraction to the antiquarian and traveller. The pleasure-grounds and woods of Pitfour will at once arrest the admiration of strangers. Near the village of Old Deer is a cemetery, which was opened in the year 1875. A fair is held at Aiky Brae on the first Wednesday after the 19th of July, and at Old Deer on the first Wednesday after the 19th of December. The population of the whole parish in the year 1871, was 5,085.

LONGSIDE, also a parish in Buchan, contains the village of its name, which latter is about 30 miles north of Aberdeen, 6 west of Peterhead, and 4 from Old Deer. A handsome church was opened here for divine service on the 7th of August, 1836; an Episcopalian chapel, a Free church, and public and private schools are also in the village. The village of MINTLAW, in this parish, is 3 miles from Longside, on the road leading from Aberdeen and Fraserburgh. Fairs are held at Mintlaw on the second Tuesday in every month. Cattle markets are held at Longside on the second Thursday after the second Tuesday in every month. Feeing fairs are held on the second Thursday in May and the second Tuesday in November. Population of the whole parish in 1871, 3,321.

NEW MACHAR,

CRAIG DAM, DYCE, FINTRAY, AND UDNY.

NEW MACHAR is a parish in the district of Buchan, lying chiefly in Aberdeenshire, but partly in the county of Banff; it extends nine miles in length, by two and a half in breadth; the parish kirk is ten miles from Aberdeen. The country is generally rather flat, and the soil is mostly arable, with several patches of wet mossy land, while in the southern quarter are some fine plantations. There is a small lake near the boundary of Old Machar, called Bishop's Loch, in which is an island, whereon stands the ruins of a castle once belonging to the bishops of Aberdeen.

CRAIG DAM, in the neighbourhood of Tarves, has a neat chapel of the United Secession, and a free school, endowed by a Mr. Peter Barron, of Harply, in the county of Norfolk. The river Ythan passes through this district, watering a soil various in quality, but mostly fertile.

DYCE parish is of considerable extent, lying on the south bank of the Don, which river separates it from Fintray, and Newhills parish divides it from Old Aberdeen. The Tyre-begar-ridge runs through the district from south to north; one of the loftiest hills is surmounted by a Druidical temple. The parish kirk is seven and a half miles from Aberdeen, and four from New Machar. The Great North of Scotland Railway Company have a station here.

FINTRAY parish is five miles in length, by from three to four in breadth. On the banks of the Don the land is fertile and susceptible of profitable cultivation, but other parts are hilly. An abbey formerly existed in this parish—the Rev. J. Leslie, the late minister, possessed a stone inscribed with the date 1386—supposed to have formed a fraction of the building, and a silver cup, dated 1633, which tradition records to have been manufactured from the silver of the image of St. Meddin, the tutelar saint of the parish. The kirk is about ten miles and a half from Aberdeen. There is a station on the Great North of Scotland line at Kinaldie, about one mile from the village of Haddon. Within the parish is a considerable mill for the manufacture of woollen goods, the machinery of which is worked both by steam and water power. Fairs are held on the first Saturday in February, April, July and December.

UDNY parish extends about five miles in length and breadth, and contains a neat and pleasantly situated village, 14 miles N. of Aberdeen, and 4 from New Machar. The soil of the parish is for the most part fertile, and the land enclosed and well cultivated. It has a well conducted school. Fairs are held at Udny Station the last Thursday in every month.

POST OFFICE, New Machar, George Cooper, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts (from Aberdeen) at twenty minutes past six morning, and are despatched thereto at a quarter before two afternoon.

Post Office, Dyce, John Rae, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts (from Aberdeen) at six morning, and twenty minutes past one afternoon, and are despatched thereto at a quarter-past two afternoon, and ten minutes to eight night.

Post Office, Udny, William Giles, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts (from Aberdeen) at seven morning, and are despatched thereto at ten minutes past one noon, and five minutes to seven evening, and on Mondays at twenty-five minutes past seven morning.

Letters arrive from all parts (from Aberdeen) on Sundays at half-past six morning, and are despatched at thirty-five minutes past nine morning.

Post Office, Fintray, Alexander Joss, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts (from Aberdeen) at twenty minutes to eight morning, and are despatched thereto at a quarter to eleven morning.

OLD MELDRUM, BOURTIE AND TARVES.

OLD MELDRUM is a parish, a burgh of barony, and a market town—the latter pleasantly situated on the road from Aberdeen to Banff, 18 miles N.W. of the former, 27 from the latter, and 5 from Inverurie. The streets and dwellings are irregularly laid out, but of late have been much improved. The principal public buildings are the town hall, which has a neat spire, and the new school, recently built. Meldrum was constituted a burgh of barony in the year 1672, under the jurisdiction of two baillies; B. C. Urquhart, Esq. is superior of the burgh. The seat of this gentleman (Meldrum House) is romantically situated, and, from its antique style of architecture, possesses a striking effect, and being surrounded with fine scenery, presents the characteristics of a delightful residence. The principal branches of business are comprised in an extensive distillery, a brewery and a corn mill. The district is partly arable and parly pastoral; the soil of the southern portion is fertile, but that of the northern shallow and less fruitful. The places of worship are the Established and Free churches, and United Presbyterian and Episcopal chapels. There are two excellent schools in the town.

BOURTIE, a parish, is four miles in length and two in breadth, generally cultivated; it lies between Meldrum and Inverurie. About the middle of the parish there are two ranges of hills—the greater part clothed with refreshing verdure. The remains of ancient fortifications are visible throughout this district. Population in 1871, 2,830.

The parish of TARVES lies between Ellon and Old Meldrum, being four miles distant from the latter place, and is bounded by Methlick on the north, and Old Meldrum on the west, and is watered in its eastern quarter by the river Ythan; its length is about 9 miles, and its breadth 6. The general outline of the parish is a flat surface, interspersed with some hills of inferior altitude. The soil is diversified in its composition, but is for the most part fertile, and there are some fine plantations on the verge of the river. Population in 1871, 2,288.

PETERHEAD,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF BODDAM, BUCHANHAVEN, BURNHAVEN, INVERNETTIE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PETERHEAD is a considerable sea port town, a burgh of barony, and parish within the district of Buchan, 141 miles N. by W. of Edinburgh, 31 S.E. of Banff, 32 N.E. of Aberdeen, 15 S.S.E. of Fraserburgh, and 524 miles from London. It is situated upon a peninsula (the most easterly point of Scotland), about a mile south of the mouth of the river Ugie, the isthmus between the peninsula and the mainland being only eight hundred yards wide. The town is built in the form of a cross, and is divided into four districts called the Kirktown, Ronheads, Keithinch, and Peterhead Proper. The houses, which are built of granite (so abundant in various parts of the county), are all of them neat, and many of them commodious and elegant. The town is gas-lighted, and the inhabitants are plenteously supplied with excellent spring water. In years gone by the wells of Peterhead were much frequented; the waters are chalybeate, and are abundant in the town and neighbourhood. Fossil shells in great quantities, and of various kinds, are found in the neighbourhood, twenty or thirty feet above the level of the sea, and these of kinds not to be met with in an original state; many curious pebbles also may be picked up on the shore. The ruins of Inverugie Castle are situated about 2½ miles from Peterhead. The walls of this castle are still standing, and by means of a winding staircase in one of the towers, an ascent may be made to the roof, and a beautiful view of the valley of the Ugie obtained. The ruined castle of Ravenscraig stands on the opposite side of the river, about a quarter of a mile from Inverugie Castle. It is built upon a rock, and is a very good specimen of the ancient Scottish baronial style, in the square form so common to the beginning of the 13th century. Its walls are of such strength that, previous to the use of artillery, they would have rendered the place impregnable. Numerous elegant buildings have recently been erected in the centre of the town. The court-house, a handsome building of granite, is in Queen street, in which the sheriff's court is held weekly on Friday. A public building which claims particular attention is the town-house, at the head of the principal street; it is an elegant edifice, sixty feet long and forty-nine feet wide, with a spire 125 feet high, and a fine illuminated clock. The town-hall, one of the apartments, is a spacious, elegant room, and one of equal dimensions is handsomely fitted up as a court-room, in which the baillie court holds their sittings. The music-hall buildings, a large and elegant pile, comprising upper and lower halls, small hall and convenient ante-room, &c., with fine shops on the ground floor, and the new lines of houses in Chapel street and Queen street, add much to the attraction and importance of the town. Peterhead was founded and erected into a burgh of barony, by George, Earl Marischal, in the year 1593, but in 1715 it was forfeited by this family, in consequence of their adherence to the unfortunate house of Stuart, and purchased, with the neighbouring lands, by the York Building Company in 1726, but that concern being dissolved, it was bought by the trustees or governors of the Merchant Maiden Hospital, Edinburgh, for £3,000, who are still the superiors. In front of the town-hall, and facing the main street, has been erected a pedestal of granite, on which has been placed a magnificent statue in bronze of Field-Marshal James Francis Edward Keith, born at Inverugie in 1696, which statue was presented, by request, to the borough of Peterhead, by King William I. of Prussia, in 1868. The pedestal bears the following inscription:—"Field-Marshal Keith, born at Inverugie 1696; killed at the battle of Hochkirchen, 14 October, 1758. The gift of William I., King of Prussia, to the town of Peterhead. August, 1868. Probus vixit, fortis obit."

Peterhead is governed by a provost and magistrates, and town council. The nomination of the magistrates was, by charter, vested in the superiors of the town and the magistrates and councillors, the latter of whom were formerly elected by a majority of the feuars, but since the elective franchise was conferred upon the burgh, the magistrates and councillors are elected by the householders in the burgh. The town now enjoys the privileges of a parliamentary burgh, and in conjunction with Kinore, Elgin, Cullen, Banff and Inverurie, returns one member to parliament—the present member being Mountstuart Elphinstone Grant Duff, Esq., of Eden, Aberdeenshire. Upon the county of Aberdeen being divided into an Eastern and Western division, and returning two members to parliament, Peterhead was created the returning burgh for the eastern division, and is known as the capital of Buchan, or East Aberdeenshire.

For a long series of years the harbours of Peterhead have been held to be of great importance. So early as 1661, in the first parliament of King Charles II., an act was passed "For a contribution for repairing the harbours of Peterhead." In 1705 an act of the Scottish privy council was obtained, for a voluntary contribution within all the parish churches of the three Lothians and bewest of the Forth, for building and repairing these harbours; and in 1729, and again in 1739, the convention of royal burghs authorised a voluntary contribution throughout all the royal burghs in Scotland for the same purpose. In 1807, and again in 1827, acts of parliament were obtained for their further improvements, and since 1798, considerably upwards of £100,000 have been expended on these improvements; and, at the present time, very extensive alterations and additions on both the north and the south harbours are about to be effected, a new bill in parliament having just been obtained for this purpose. When the works in contemplation have been finished, Peterhead will possess one of the finest and safest harbours to be found along the whole of the east coast of Scotland. The harbours are managed by a rotary board of trustees, a certain number of which are elected annually from among the feuars holding directly under the governors of the Merchant Maiden Hospital, the ship owners and shore due ratepayers. The revenue can be applied only to the maintenance of the harbours, the payment of the interest of the debt, and the liquidation of the principal; no individual or body of persons have any pecuniary interest in them. Peterhead possesses the grand advantage of north and south harbours, respectively of eleven and seven acres in extent, communicating by means of a canal or channel, over which is an elegant and permanent cast-iron swing bridge, upon the construction of which upwards of £8,000 was expended. In the north harbour there are two graving or dry docks, and at the entrance of both harbours are good lighthouses. There is a spacious bay, with good anchorage, on the south of the town, on the opposite side of which stands the Buchaness lighthouse, having a beautiful revolving light. The bay is perfectly safe in any sort of weather, except when the wind is eastward. The bridge over the canal that connects the harbours forms the communication between the Keith Inch and other parts of the town. The south harbour has twelve to fourteen feet of water at medium springs, and eight to ten feet at neap tides; and the north harbour has, at spring tides, eighteen feet of water. At an early period its vessels traded to the ports in the Baltic, the Levant, and to America; and in 1795 its merchants could fit out twenty-eight vessels, carrying upwards of 3,000 tons. The revenue of the harbours, in 1800, was only £100, while, in 1849, it amounted to £4,000, in 1858, to £4,391 19s. 7d., and in 1875 upwards of £8,000. In no subject is this community more deeply interested than in the whale and sea fisheries, many having their capital largely invested, and others their friends and relatives engaged in this important but hazardous branch of national industry. More than eighty years have now elapsed since the first vessel sailed from Peterhead for the icy regions; and while many other ports have been declining, and some have given up the trade altogether, Peterhead has still continued it, and holds a high position among the British ports in the whale fishery. In the year 1788 one vessel was sent out, and up to 1803 there was no increase. From 1804 to 1814 the number varied from two to eight, and to 1830 from ten to sixteen; but in 1843 they had decreased to nine. Since then the number has continued to increase, the highest being thirty-two, including two steamers, added in 1857. The number was again diminished, only seventeen vessels being employed in 1862-3-4, and since 1867 this branch of industry has been gradually declining. The herring fishery, which was commenced here in 1818 by a joint stock company, has become important, Peterhead having now attained the second rank in this branch of maritime industry. Owing to the liberal encouragement, both by the superiors of the town and the trustees of the harbours, this fishery must go on rapidly increasing; and Peterhead may, in a few years, be reasonably expected to stand inferior to none as a fishing station. Independent of the fishing and shipping trades the town enjoys a good local one. There are many respectable and well-stored establishments, in the wholesale and retail business of grocery, drapery, &c. Five banking establishments are in operation here, one iron foundry, four ship and boat builders, several curriers, millers, timber merchants, coach builders, fish curers, woollen and saw mills and brick and tile manufacturers in the neighbourhood. There are also two extensive and prosperous granite polishing establishments, employing upwards of 100 men, in addition to powerful machinery—exclusive of the facilities which the granite quarries in the neighbourhood present for local purposes, they supply no inconsiderable item in the amount of exports.

Between the years 1817 and 1822 inclusive, 35,112 tons of this stone were shipped at Peterhead, chiefly in large blocks, for the docks at London; but since that period the exportation has considerably decreased. The quarries are principally worked by the Aberdeen polishing firms. The exports besides consist of cattle, oats, meal, pork, cheese, eggs, butter, herrings, oils, &c. A few years ago Peterhead ranked as a creek only, under the port of Aberdeen; but it has been made a separate and independent port, the limits of which extend from the north bank of the river Ythan, northward and westward to the Pouk Burn, Aberdeenshire. The Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland Railway, opened in 1862, connecting this town with Fraserburgh and Aberdeen, adds much to its importance.

The Established church, situated at the conjunction of the south and west roads, combines elegance with convenience, and has a fine spire; there are also two Quoad-Sacra chapels in Queen street and at Blackhill. The Episcopal chapel is a handsome modern edifice, in the design of which the architect has displayed considerable taste. The other places of worship are, one for the Free church, a new chapel erected in 1870 for Independents, a United Presbyterian chapel, one for Methodists, a Baptist meeting-house, and a chapel for Roman Catholics—the last named is one of the best specimens of architecture in the town. The governors of the Merchant Maiden Hospital, of Edinburgh, proprietors of the estate of Peterhead, have laid out and enclosed a large space of suitable ground at Peterhead as a public cemetery.

Amongst the literary institutions of Peterhead may be mentioned as the principal, a reading society, established in 1808, and a mechanics' institution, founded in 1836. The library belonging to the reading society numbers upwards of four thousand volumes, and the library of the mechanics' about one thousand. There is also a solicitors' library. A very valuable museum, collected by the late Adam Arbuthnot, Esq., by whom it was bequeathed to the authorities for the use of the town, contains a great variety of specimens collected from the animal and mineral kingdoms, while the collection of coins is one of the most complete to be met with. A hall in Chapel street has been recently built for the collection, which is under the care and management of the magistrates and town council. There are several excellent schools. There are two newspapers established here—the Peterhead Sentinel, established in 1856 (the proprietor, David Scott, having published several interesting works connected with the district) and the Buchan Observer, both creditably conducted, and enjoying an encouraging circulation, especially in the district of Buchan: the former is published on Wednesday and the latter on Friday. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the third Tuesday in May and the second Tuesday in November, both old style. Population of Peterhead in 1871, 11,506.

BODDAM is a neat village and considerable fishing station, in the parish of Peterhead, about four miles south of that town. The harbour here was extended a few years since by the Earl of Aberdeen, at a cost somewhat exceeding £2,000, and an act of parliament was passed in 1845, constituting Boddam a port or harbour. Some years ago the estate of Boddam was purchased from the Earl of Aberdeen by William Aiton, Esq., who lives on the estate. The fishery here is prosecuted with great diligence and success. A chapel of ease and a handsome new board school, supplementary to Peterhead, are in the village. The population in 1871 was 803.

BUCHANHAVEN is a small fishing village within the burgh of Peterhead.

BURNHAVEN and INVERNETTIE are two small villages in the parish of Peterhead, situated about half way between that town and Boddam, and chiefly inhabited by fishermen. At Invernettie the Scottish Highland Distillery Co. Limited have very extensive works.

RHYNIE AND ESSIE,

AUCHINDOIR AND KEARN, WITH LUMSDEN, CABRACH, CLATT AND KENNETHMONT.

RHYNIE and ESSIE is a united parish in the district of Strathbogie; it comprehends a superfices of 30 square miles, bounded on the north by the barony of Gartly, on the south by Auchindoir, and on the west by Cabrach. The centre may be about 10 miles south from Huntly. The soil is rich and fertile on the banks of the Bogie; towards the hills it is light and gravelly, yet productive. The only antiquity in this parish deserving of notice is a vitrified fort on the top of the hill of Noth. There are two springs in the neighbourhood of Rhynie, remarkable for the surprising quantity of water they discharge, each being capable of turning a mill at its source. Markets are held on the first Wednesday in June, the day after Keith in September, and the day after Kennethmont in October. Feeing markets are held on the Mondays before the 26th of May and the 22nd of November; also cattle markets during the winter are held on the Saturday before the fourth Monday in each month. In 1871 the parish contained a population of 1,195 persons, and the village 482.

AUCHINDOIR, a parish with which KEARN has been incorporated, is about 7 miles long and 5 broad, distant from Huntly 12 miles. A bluish coloured fibrous asbestos is found in great quantities in the fissures of the rocks, which the sportsmen frequently use for wadding to their fowling-pieces. The parish also abounds with freestone. The only river of note is the Bogie. In this parish is a small village called LUMSDEN, erected within the last thirty-five years, and named after the proprietor. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in April, last Friday in May, and third Tuesday in August, (o. s.) Population of the Quoad Sacra parish in 1871, 1,545.

CABRACH parish is partly in the county of Aberdeen and partly in that of Banff, extending in length 5 miles by about 3 in breadth—distant from Aberdeen 45 miles, and from Huntly 20. The Deveron and the Fidditch water this parish. The mountains abound with game. Population in 1871, 775.

CLATT is a parish in Aberdeenshire. The village is situated 10 miles S.S.E. from Huntly and 33 W.N.W. from Aberdeen, on the rivulet Gardie, which afterwards falls into the Urie. It was elevated into a burgh of barony by James VI. in 1501, with power to hold weekly and annual markets. The superiority belongs to the family of Gordon, of Knockespock, who have evinced a laudable anxiety for the improvement of the place. A fair is held on the third Wednesday in November. Population of the Quoad Sacra parish in 1871, 483.

KENNETHMONT parish extends about 6 miles in length by 8 in breadth, and is about 8 miles south from Huntly. The parish is watered by several small streams, and the general soil is fruitful. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,062.

POST OFFICE, RHYNIE, James P. Roger, Post Master.—Letters arrive from the North and South at twenty-five minutes to twelve morning and two afternoon, and from Strathdon at twenty-five minutes past seven morning, and are despatched to the North and South at eight morning and three afternoon, and to Strathdon at eleven morning. Double mail to Strathdon on Saturdays, arriving at a quarter before six evening, and despatched thereto at half-past seven evening.

Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

Post Office, KENNETHMONT, John Morrison, Post Office.—Letters arrive from all parts, Aberdeen and Insch at nine morning and one noon, and are despatched thereto at half-past six morning and half-past one afternoon.

ROSEHEARTY IN PITSLIGO,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF PITTULIE, SANDHAVEN AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ROSEHEARTY is a maritime village and burgh of barony, in the parish of Pitsligo, 4½ miles W. from Fraserburgh and 18 E. from Banff. It has a good harbour capable of admitting vessels of from eighty to one hundred tons, which, during the last few years, has been considerably extended. The chief imports are timber, coals and salt, and it exports fish and grain; its commerce, however, is not extensive. Although inconsiderable in size, it is a burgh of barony, having been raised to that distinction by Charles II. Within the parish are two or three private schools, a parochial one, and a public school.

The parish of PITSLIGO lies in the district of Buchan, on the sea coast, betwixt Aberdour on the west and Fraserburgh on the east, and commencing about two miles west of Kinnaird Head. The land is generally fertile, and the face of the country level. Pitsligo Castle, formerly the seat of Lord Pitsligo (a title in the Forbes family), is an ancient structure, surrounded with extensive gardens. The labouring portion of the population in the parish are principally employed in fishing, and others in agriculture. PITTULIE and SANDHAVEN are two small villages in this parish, both situated between Kinnaird Head and Rosehearty Point, inhabited chiefly by fishermen. The population of Rosehearty in 1871 was 1,206, and of the entire parish of Pitsligo, 2,218.

POST OFFICE, ROSEHEARTY, Janet Duncan, Post Mistress. Letters from all parts arrive (from Fraserburgh) at eleven morning and ten minutes past three afternoon, and are despatched thereto at fifty-five minutes past nine morning and twenty-five minutes past three afternoon.

Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

Pillar Letter Box at PITTULIE.—Cleared every day (Sunday excepted) at a quarter-past four afternoon.

STRICHEN, ABERDOUR, TYRIE AND NEW PITSLIGO.

STRICHEN is a parish in the district of Buchan. The village, which is a neat one, is well supplied with water, and there is also a gas company, but the streets are not lighted; it is 38½ miles N. of Aberdeen, 20 W. of Banff, 16 W. by N. from Turriff, 15 N. by W. from Peterhead, and 9 S. from Fraserburgh, situated on the north bank of the Ugie. The town house is a convenient and elegant structure, erected in the year 1816, by the Right Hon. Lord Lovat, at an expense of £2,000. On the side of one of the hills in this parish are the figures of a horse and a stag, formed by large pieces of stone, which have a singular effect at a distance. Upon the same hill is hunter's lodge, on which is inscribed, "This hunter's lodge, Robb Gibb commands." The Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland Railway passes through the parish, and has a station in the village. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, an Episcopalian chapel, and a United Presbyterian chapel; also one for the Roman Catholics; and the schools are, a public school and two or three private ones. Fairs are held here on the first Thursday of every month. Population of Strichen in 1871, was 1,184; and of the whole parish, 2,254.

ABERDOUR parish, 9 miles W. of Fraserburgh, and 16 E. of Banff, stretches along the Moray Frith for about ten miles. The shore here is so bold and precipitous, that there are only three places where boats can effect a landing; and the rocks have been excavated by the sea into innumerable caves, one of which is ninety feet long and twenty-two broad. Upon a precipice overhanging the sea are the ruins of the ancient castle of Dundargue, a place of great strength and importance in feudal times, and noted for sustaining a long siege in 1337, when Henry de Beaumont, the English Earl of Buchan, was obliged to capitulate to Andrew Murray, regent of Scotland, during the unwarrantable captivity of King Robert Bruce in England. The small village of PENNAN, situated on the shore of Aberdour bay, is chiefly inhabited by fishermen. Population of Aberdour, in 1871, 720; and of the whole parish, 2,176.

TYRIE parish extends about ten miles in length, by four and a half in breadth. The surface is agreeably diversified with hill and dale, heath, moss, meadow, corn land, and grass parks. On the northern verge of the parish is the village church of Tyrie, an ancient structure, supposed to have been originally erected about the year 1004, when the Thane of Buchan routed the Danish army upon the neighbouring eminences. The late Sir William Forbes founded, in the southern quarter of the parish, the village of NEW PITSLIGO, into which the weaving of linen was introduced, but since power-loom weaving began, it gradually decreased; and, at the present time, there is scarcely any done, but the weaving of dress winceys is carried on to a considerable extent, and affords employment to some of its inhabitants. The village is now lighted by gas, and near it are a few good granite quarries. Population of New Pitsligo, in 1871, 2,126; and of the whole parish of Tyrie, 3,446.

TARLAND AND MIGVIE,

COULL, LEOCHEL-CUSHNIE AND LOGIE-COLDSTONE.

TARLAND and MIGVIE, united parishes, form a very irregular and disjointed district on the western borders of Aberdeenshire. The village of Tarland—which is a burgh of barony—is 31 miles from Aberdeen, 16 from Alford, 7 from Aboyne, and 12 from Ballater, situated nearly in the centre of the district of Cromar. The lands about the village are mostly level, but the greater proportion of the parish is mountainous, and the seasons are cold; the woods, which have been planted, will, however, be the means of materially ameliorating the latter inconvenience. A small rivulet runs by the village, and falls into the river Dee, near Aboyne village, and a detached part of the parish is watered by the Don. Branches, respectively, of the Union Bank of Scotland and the Aberdeen Town and County Bank have been lately established in this burgh. Fairs are held on the Wednesday before the 5th of January, and on the 5th if Wednesday, second Wednesday and last Wednesday in February, first Wednesday and Wednesday after the 26th in May, Friday after St. Fairs in June, on the Friday after first Tuesday in August, second Wednesday after first Tuesday in October, Tuesday and Wednesday after 22nd, or on that day if a Tuesday, in November. Population of the united parish of Tarland and Migvie in 1871, 1,275, and of the village of Tarland, 315.

COULL is a parish in the district of Marr—the kirk is about 39 miles from Aberdeen, lying at the head of Strathcromar, and separated from the Dee on the south by Aboyne. It is a finely sheltered tract of land, triangular in shape, and generally fertile—the hilly portions being, however, bleak and pastoral. The ruins of the very old castle of Coull are distinguishable, but of its ancient possessors little is known. Population in 1871, 542.

LEOCHEL and CUSHNIE are united in one parish, and contain two ancient castles, now in ruins, called Linturk and Corse; in the latter were born several of the Forbes, one of whom (Patric, Forbes, of Corse) wrote a commentary on the Revelations. Craigievar, the elegant seat of Sir William Forbes, is also in this parish and from its elevated situation commands an extensive prospect of the country. Population of the united parish in 1871, 1,514.

TURRIFF,

KING EDWARD AND NEW BYTH.

TURRIFF is a free burgh of barony (of which the Earl of Fife is the feudal superior), the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of the parish of that name, 34½ miles N.N.W. of Aberdeen, 17 N.N.W. of Old Meldrum, and 11 S.S.E. of Banff, situate on a tributary stream of the Deveron, near that river. Its charter, dated the 10th of March, 1511, was granted by James IV. in favour of Thomas Dickson, prebend of Turriff; by this the inhabitants were entitled to hold a weekly market on the Sabbath day, and three fairs annually, each to continue eight days. A sheriff's small debt court is held quarterly in the Town Hall, and justice of peace courts when required. Police courts are held on Thursdays. In 1858 the householders adopted certain provisions of the Police Improvement (Scotland) Act of 1850, and latterly almost the entire provisions of the more recent act of 1862, in virtue of which the affairs of the burgh are regulated and administered by nine commissioners of police, three of whom are elected annually; these commissioners elect from their own number one senior and two junior magistrates, who in their turn appoint a procurator fiscal and clerk of court, and within their jurisdiction exercise in all cases of petty offences the functions of sheriff and magistrates of police. Turriff is one of the most flourishing little towns in the north of Aberdeenshire. The place is clean and neat, and gas-lighted by a joint stock company, formed in 1837. In the same year a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland was established here, and subsequently three other banks, all of them doing a prosperous business. One of these, the North of Scotland Bank, has erected, at a cost of about £2,000, a handsome building, situated at the junction of Main street with High street, the style of architecture being the old Scotch baronial style; the stone used is the red sandstone from the quarries in the neighbourhood; the tower contains a clock having dials facing north, south and west which is fitted up with self-lighting apparatus, and serves as a town's clock. There are several inns and posting houses. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and an Episcopalian chapel, and the schools comprise several public ones and a private academy in which boarders are received. The vicinage of Turriff is of an agreeable character, and the neighbourhood is very respectable, and several families of distinction are among the residents. Forglen House, the seat of Sir Robert John Abercrombie, Bart., a few miles distant, is one of the most elegant and imposing mansions in the north of Scotland. Among the industries may be named milling and woollen manufacturing. For a long time past Turriff had to a considerable extent cultivated a pickled pork trade, but since the extension of railway communication to it and the surrounding district, that business has assumed formidable dimensions, and Turriff, in this respect, may now be regarded as the Chicago of Scotland. Fairs are held on the second and fourth Wednesday in each month, also Saturday before the 27th of May and Saturday before the 23rd of November. The population of the parish of Turriff in 1871 was 4,848, of which the town contained 2,277.

KING EDWARD, a parish in the northern part of the county, is 12 miles in length from west to east, by from 2 to 5 in breadth, its western extremity being washed by the Deveron; on the north it is bounded by Gamrie, on the east by Tyrie, and on the south by Montquhitter and Turriff. The general surface is undulating; there are extensive plantations, and the district is advanced in agriculture. A streamlet, tributary to the Deveron, pursues a westerly direction through the parish, and on its right bank stands the ruins of the ancient castle of King Edward, once the seat of the potent Comyns, Earl of Buchan. In 1871 the parish had a population of 1,058 persons.

NEW BYTH, formed into a Quoad Sacra parish in 1868, is bounded by Gamrie on the north, King Edward on the west, Turriff and Montquhitter on the south, and New Deer and Aberdour on the east. It is composed of part of King Edward, New Deer and Aberdour, and was provided with a chapel in 1793. The village of New Byth is situated about a mile from the public road, the inhabitants being engaged chiefly in agriculture. Excepting towards the the north and west, the general aspect of the parish is bleak and barren. Byth House, one of the seats of B. C. Urquhart, Esq., of Old Meldrum, is situated about a mile north of the village, and is surrounded with wood, the only relieving feature of the district. Population, 2,216. FISHRIE and CRUDIE are villages in this parish. Population of the village in 1871, 609.

ARGYLESHIRE,

OR, as it is frequently written Argyllshire, is a large county in the south-western extremity of the Highlands. What may be termed the continental part is bounded on the north by Inverness-shire, on the east by that county and Perthshire and Dumbartonshire, and on the south and west by bays and straits of the Atlantic Ocean. Its extreme length is one hundred and fifteen miles; its breadth averaging about thirty-three; and it has not less than six hundred miles of coast washed by the sea. The mainland, including the peninsula of Kintyre, has been computed to contain 2,735 square miles; while the islands connected with it are supposed to comprise 1,068 more; whereby the whole extent of land in Argyleshire may be estimated at 3,800 square miles. The county is divided into six principal districts—ARGYLE PROPER, COWAL, ISLAY, KINTYRE (or Cantyre), LORN and MULL. Cowal is divided from Dumbartonshire by Loch Long, and bounded by Loch Fyne on the west; betwixt Loch Fyne and Loch Linnhe, and stretching away to the north, is Lorn; from which, on its south-west quarter, there extends in a southerly direction into the Irish sea, the peninsula of Kintyre. The islands of Mull, Jura, and Islay are divided from the continent, or from each other, merely by narrow sounds; and may be taken from their proximity and accessibility as little else than portions of the mainland, surrounded by salt water rivers. There are other districts of inferior size within the principal ones—as Ardnamurchan, the most westerly point of Sunart; Appin, a piece of Lorn bordering on Loch Linnhe; Glenorchy, another portion of Lorn on its eastern side; and Knapdale, occupying a position between Kintyre and Nether Lorn.

EARLY HISTORY.—This county, together with that of Perth, is presumed to have constituted the ancient Caledonian Kingdom, while the Romans and Picts were in possession of the greater part of Scotland. In former ages the western coast of Argyleshire was perpetually exposed to the descents and depredations of the Danes and the Irish, but the original inhabitants never suffered them to penetrate any considerable distance into the interior; if an enemy landed, or was seen hovering on the coast, in the course of a few hours the whole country was alarmed, and the men repaired to the shore completely armed. The heroes celebrated by Ossian were a militia, established in Argyleshire, for the purpose of defending the country in any sudden emergency. Of old the chieftain was considered the father, rather than the master of his clan; his followers loved him with a degree of enthusiasm, which made them cheerfully undergo any fatigue or danger; and it was his interest, as well as his pride and glory, to requite so animated an adherence to the utmost of his power. The rent paid him was chiefly consumed in feasts given at the habitations of his tenants; on these occasions they all lived together as friends, and the departure of the chief always occasioned deep regret. The cattle and corn formerly consumed at these feasts of hospitality were, in more polished times, required to be brought to the landlord's mansion, and thus friendship degenerated into oppression. Campbell of Auchinbreck had anciently a right to carry off the best cow he could find, upon several properties, each Martinmas, by way of mart—the island of Islay paid five hundred such cows yearly; but this badge of slavery has been converted into a modus of twenty shillings a head. The inconveniences attending this state arose from the petty quarrels between neighbouring clans, excited by a spirit of plunder, and absurd points of fantastical honour. At this period the Scottish kings had no authority over this part of the country; the M'Donalds of the Isles assuming royal powers, holding parliaments, and enacting laws, until the Bruces brought the disorderly clans into some kind of subordination. From this time, in their different wars with the English, the chiefs had recourse to the assistance of the Highlanders, with whom and the inhabitants of the low country, they contracted debts, rendering the condition of the middle classes worse, as the chiefs found it necessary to require an addition to their yearly revenue, and, in order to enforce obedience, reference was had to penal laws. In this respect the king was obliged to gratify his feudal barons; for they were always formidable to his throne. But when the laws presented any obstacle to their rapacious exactions, they openly set them at defiance: they erected gibbets, and hanged their tenants without trial or mercy. The evil became at last so flagrant, that a jury and bailiff or sheriff were introduced; but this measure did not remove the mischief; for the law officer was not unfrequently bribed to spare the real culprit, while the poorer and more innocent were considered fit subjects for the gallows. In 1748 these abominable jurisdictions were totally abolished; and no sooner were men emancipated from their fetters than they began to improve their properties: and since that time the face and condition of this county has undergone the happiest change. The ancient inhabitants of the Highlands of Argyleshire prided themselves on their endurance of hunger and fatigue; they were passionately fond of music and poetry; and the song and dance soon made them forget their toils. Now the sound of the bagpipe is more rarely heard; the taste for poetry has disappeared; the deer have abandoned the mountains, and extensive forests are either converted into sheep walks, or have succumbed to modern cultivation.

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE, CLIMATE, &c.—The surface of this county is, like most other parts of the Highlands, mountainous, bleak, and uncomfortable to the view; hills, rocks, and huge mountains rise upon each other in stupendous and fearful disorder. Glencroe and Glencoe are, perhaps, amongst the most awfully picturesque valleys that can be contemplated. The coast is rocky, but indented with navigable bays and islets, which afford good harbours for shipping. The vales and flat parts are cultivated; the mountains feed great quantities of sheep and black cattle; the woods, of which there are still some, principally in the Breadalbane district, afford shelter to deer and other game, while much wealth is got from the bowels of the mountains, which contain mines of lead, copper, &c., with extensive quarries of slate—of the latter the most considerable, perhaps, are wrought at Ballachulish, and in Easdale, Seil and Belnahua Islands, &c.; there are likewise several large granite quarries; of these, the principal are in Mull, by Auchnacraig, and at Furnace and Ardshiel. In the beginning of the eighteenth century, much of the natural wood was cut up and sold by the proprietors, at prices by no means proportionate to the injury perpetrated on the face of the country; despoiling it of one its most interesting features, finding, in the introduction of modern plantations, but meagre substitute for the noble forest tree. The county, altogether, abounds more in romantic scenes than fertile plains and wood-clad hills. The number of acres in tillage bear an insignificant proportion to those occupied by pasture, wood, hills, lakes and rivers. The CLIMATE of the lower parts of Argyleshire is mild and temperate, but in the upper inland districts the atmosphere is severe. On the tops of many of the hills the snow often lies for months, chilling the air and giving the country a cheerless wintry aspect, even in tolerably mild open weather. In the sinuosities of the valleys the air is of a more bland nature, these places being protected from the north and north-west winds, and having generally a southerly exposure. The central districts are more subject to rains than the coast, from the proximity of high hills, whose summits attract and break the clouds from the Atlantic. The most considerable elevations in Argyleshire are, Beininturk, 2,170; Sliagaoil, 2,228; Beneaton, 2,306; Scur Choinice, 2,364; Beinima, 2,389; Creach Bein, 2,439; Paps of Jura, 2,470; Bennahua, 2,515; Buchael Etive, 2,537; Benreisipoll, 2,661; Benanambran, 2,720; Scur Dhonuil, 2,730; Bein-more, 3,185; Cruachlassa, 3,000; and Cruachan, 3,670 feet, respectively, above the sea.

The MANUFACTURES of Argyleshire are yet in so feeble a state as to be scarcely worthy of notice. The principal article made on a large scale for exportation is whiskey, which is of a remarkably fine quality; there are distilleries in several parts of the county, for which Glasgow is the depot. From the peculiar form and watery intersection of this county, the communication between its insular and mainland portions has been greatly facilitated by steam power navigation; and now a very considerable number of steam vessels are constantly employed conveying passengers and goods to and fro throughout the county, and in transporting the county produce to Glasgow. There is not, at the present day, a bay, a loch, or inlet, but holds a daily or commands a weekly communication with the Lowlands, and the several districts of the country. By this means the farmers are encouraged to fatten stock which they would never otherwise think of rearing. Steam boats are, in short, the lively causes of every kind of improvement in this county, and in agriculture, changes are yearly witnessed in the different districts, from the modern improvements in husbandry.

RIVERS AND LAKES.—The county is well watered by rivers (not considerable), brooks and lochs, which abound with fish. Loch Fyne is celebrated as furnishing the best herrings of any found on the coast of Scotland, and it was estimated that there were caught, in this arm of the sea, from twenty to thirty thousand barrels annually; but the "take" has greatly fallen off in later years. Loch Awe (pronounced Loch O) is a beautiful fresh water lake, about twenty-eight miles long and from one to two broad, reckoned the most picturesque lake of any in the Highlands, and possesses many lovely woody islets, among which are seen the ruins of several old castles; its waters, which abound with salmon, trout, and eel, discharge themselves into Loch Etive, a branch of the Atlantic Ocean, at Bonaw Ferry.

ECCLESIASTICAL DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION, &c.—This extensive county is divided, ecclesiastically, into not more than fifty parishes, which contain only two Royal Burghs, INVERARY, at the head of Loch Fyne, and CAMPBELTOWN, in Kintyre, the former of which is a station of the circuit court of justiciary. One member is returned to parliament for the county, the present representative being the Marquis of Lorne. The burghs of Campbeltown, Inverary, and Oban, in conjunction with Ayr and Irvine, are also represented, the sitting member being Sir W. J. Montgomery Cuninghame. The parliamentary constituency for the burghs, in 1875-6, was 4,160; and for the county 3,072. The Duke of Argyll is the proprietor of a large portion of the shire; and he is the chief of the family of Campbell, a surname which is found over the whole region, among high and low. His eldest son, the Marquis of Lorne, was, on the 21st day of March, 1871, married to Princess Louise, the fourth daughter of Her Majesty the Queen. The lordship of Campbell was elevated to the earldom of Argyll in 1457 by James III.; to a Marquisate in 1641 by Charles I., and to a Dukedom in 1701 by William III. By the returns made to Government in 1861, the county contained a population of 79,724, and by those for 1871, 75,679.

APPIN AND BALLACHULISH SOUTH,

WITH CORPACH, ARDGOUR, KINGAIRLOCH, AND THE ISLANDS OF LISMORE, SHUNA, AND THEIR VICINITIES.

APPIN, or as it is more generally called PORT APPIN, is a small village, in the united parish of Lismore and Appin, and comprised in a district of the latter appellation; situated on the point of a small promontory, on the eastern shore of Loch Linnhe, 13 miles N. of Oban, 15 N.W. of Bonaw, 35 N.W. of Inverary, 136 N.W. of Edinburgh, and 29 S.W. of Fort William. The parish is of great extent, chiefly occupied as grazing farms; but the village contains very few houses, and is a mile and a half off the main road. Three miles to the north is Appin House, the seat of the late R. Downie, Esq. of Appin; this mansion is surrounded by some of the finest timber on the coast. Miss G. Downie is the present occupant. The church is in the same direction, nearly two miles north of the village, and there is a parliamentary church nine miles distant, on the way to Ballachulish South. On a small island near Portnacroish, full two miles north, is the ancient and partly delapidated castle of Stalker; it is nearly square, of considerable height, and has evidently been a place of some strength; and though its area is not extensive, it occupies almost a moiety of the little islet on which it stands. About half a mile from Stalker Castle, on the ISLAND OF SHUNA, are still the more ruinous remains of another fortress of this description. A fair, formerly held at Port Appin on the Friday before Martinmas, now possesses but little attraction. There is a well-attended fair, however, for black cattle, held at SHIAN FERRY, nearly three miles to the south, on the Friday before the last Wednesday in May, and the Friday before the last Wednesday in October; at CONNELL on Saturday before the last Wednesday in May, and on Thursday before the last Wednesday in October, and at CORRAN OF ARDGOUR on third Friday in October. Population of the quoad sacra parish, in 1871, 1,327.

BALLACHULISH SOUTH is a straggling but populous village, on the south shore of Loch Leven, about three miles east of Ballachulish Ferry (in the same parish), and 15½ N. of Port Appin. On a small island opposite the village of Ballachulish are the ruins of an old chapel, supposed to have been erected by St. Mungo. The island is now used as a burying ground. Near the village, at the foot of Glencoe hills, are very extensive slate quarries, the property of Lady Beresford and others, of Ballachulish, and wrought by Mr. James Gardner, Glencoe, who exports annually about 30,000 tons of this article to all parts of Scotland and the north of England; there are about six hundred men employed. A branch of the Bank of Scotland is established in the village. Within a mile of the quarries westward is an Episcopalian church, the largest in the Highlands, and a small one for the Established Church of Scotland, also one for Roman Catholics. The quoad sacra parish contained, in 1871, a population of 849 persons.

At BALLACHULISH SOUTH FERRY is a comfortable hotel and posting house, a commodious and handsome building, pleasantly situated. About three-quarters of a mile distant, a pier, with waiting room, &c. has been erected; here the steamers call, and a conveyance from the hotel awaits their arrival. A sub-post office is also here. In the immediate vicinity, at the entrance of a sequestered valley, is Ballachulish House, the property of Lady Beresford; three miles from which is ARDSHEAL, the seat of Alex. D. Andersen, Esq.

About a mile above the quarries, on the margin of Loch Leven, near the opening of a glen exceedingly wild and romantic, and almost embosomed by trees, is Invercoe House, and opposite, on the north shore of the Loch (which is here fully a mile broad), in the county of Inverness, is Callart, the modern mansion of the late Sir Duncan Cameron, Bart. of Fassifern and Callart, contributing in an eminent degree to the beauty of the landscape.

At CORRAN FERRY, where Loch Linnhe narrows to a quarter of a mile in breadth, a lighthouse has been erected. Ben Nevis is distinctly seen from here, and to the right there is a magnificent view of Glencoe.

LISMORE is an island in Loch Linnhe, ten miles in length by about two in breadth; it lies between Appin and Morven, and belongs to the same united parish with the former place. Great quantities of excellent lime, as well as oats and potatoes, are exported from hence. There is a small village on this isolated fertile spot called PORT RAMSEY; and at the southern point on a ridge of rocks projecting some distance into the channel stands a lighthouse, almost in a direct line between Oban and the sound of Mull; the light, a catophric, is on a high rounded pillar of stone masonry, and is an excellent and most useful beacon. On this island are also a church, formerly a Cathedral of the diocese of Argyll, the remains of Doune or Auchindoune Castle, at one time the residence of the bishops of Argyll, and the ruins of a Danish fort. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,838.

BONAW, TAYNUILT, ARDCHATTAN & NEIGHBOURHOOD.

BONAW, or BUNAWE, is a small scattered village on the river Awe, 122 miles N.W. of Edinburgh, 80 N.W. of Glasgow, 12 E. of Oban, and 20 N. of Inverary by Port Sonachan ferry—but round the head of Loch Awe, by Dalmally, avoiding the ferry, it is 32 miles. The Lorn Furnace Company have an establishment here for making pig-iron. The ore is of a peculiar kind, imported by the company from the district of Furness, in Lancashire, and is smelted entirely with charcoal made in the neighbourhood, from the timber produced on a large tract of country; they are said to be the only furnaces in Scotland heated solely by charcoal, and the iron is considered equal to any smelted in the kingdom. The trustees of the late Alexander Kelly, Esq. employ about three hundred men in the manufacture of the charcoal for these works. Bonaw is also much celebrated for its salmon fishery, which affords employment to a considerable number of persons in the fishing season. Large quantities of fish are sent fresh in boxes to Glasgow and other parts of Scotland, as well as pickled, sealed in jars, and kits or firkins for the London market. The church, which was erected in 1827-8, stands about a mile above the iron furnace, near the road to Inverary, where also is the parish school; the funds for both these structures were supplied by the munificence of General D. Campbell, of Lochnell. A rude block of granite, the first monument erected in Britain to the memory of Lord Nelson, may be seen on an eminence near the village.

At ARDCHATTAN, about four miles north-west on the opposite side of Loch Etive, stands the remains of an ancient priory of the Benedictines, founded in 1232, by M'Coull, ancester of the Lords of Lorne. Here Bruce is thought to have held a Gaelic council after the battle of Methven. The venerable mansion of Mrs. Jane E. Popham, of Ardchattan, is situated on a part of the site of the priory. A church was erected at Ardchattan in 1836, at an expense to the heritors of about £1,000; it contains sittings for four hundred. The objects that most forcibly strike the attention here are Loch Etive and Ben Cruachan—the latter, with its broad shoulders, rearing its blunt-pointed summit 3,670 feet above the salt water that laves his foot Its circumference at the base is twenty miles. The journey is some what fatiguing, but the view obtained from the summit will ampl reward the tourist for the trouble of ascending, as it extends ov r the whole archipelago of the western Isles from Islay to Skye; previous to rain and other changes of weather sounds are said to issue from Ben Cruachan. The population of the quoad sacra parish of Ardchattan was in 1871, 1,172.

Two miles east of TAYNUILT, where a stone bridge crosses the river Awe, is the scene of Sir Walter Scott's tale of the "Highland Widow," and two miles further is the PASS OF CRUACHAN or BRANDER where King Robert Bruce defeated Macdougal of Lorne, in 1309. Fairs are held at GLENORCHY, on the third Wednesday in March, and fourth Tuesday in November; at SHIAN FERRY, on Friday before last Wednesday in May, and Friday before last Wednesday in October; at CONNELL, on Saturday before last Wednesday in May, and on Thursday before last Wednesday in October.

CAMPBELTOWN,

WITH SALT-PANS, SADDELL, CARRADALE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CAMPBELTOWN is a royal burgh and seaport, 144 miles w. by s. of Edinburgh, and 100 s.w. of Glasgow, by sea, but by land the distance to either city is greater by 36 miles; 76 s.s.w. of Inverary, 37 s. of Tarbert, 10 N. of Southend, and 6 E. of Salt-pans, beautifully situated on a fine bay or inlet of the sea. It is a place of great antiquity, having been a royal residence so early as the fifth century, at which period, Fergus, the first king of Scotland, fixed his residence here, and it continued the seat of his successors till 843. It was then called Dalruhadhain, and a place on the north side of the present town is still known by that name, now written Dalaruan; but the appellation formerly applied to the site of modern Campbeltown was Ceann Loch (i. e. "head of the Loch"), by which name the country people still designate the town in Gaelic; the present name was given to it in honour of the Duke of Argyll, when it was made a royal burgh in 1701. The town is sheltered on the north and south sides by lofty mountains, and has one of the safest harbours in the Western Highlands, possessing a depth of from three to fifteen fathoms at low water. The haven is spacious, being nearly two miles in length by one in breadth, and protected at its mouth by the Isle of Devar, which is joined to the main land on the south side by a bar of sand, visible at low water, nearly half a mile long—the entrance to the bay being from the north. A lighthouse was erected in 1854, on the Isle of Devar, which is far more efficient than the old one formerly on the shore. On opening into the bay, the stranger's attention is arrested by the grand though wild scenery, particulary on the south side; and the prospect immediately comprises the neat local capital, Campbeltown, situate at the head of Loch Kilkerran. The public buildings are seen towering above the dwelling houses, beyond which the eye is carried for some distance over a fine, fertile, yet mountainous country. From the shore, two quays project into the bay, so as to allow vessels to load and unload at low water. The principal one, appropriated to the convenience of steam boats and heavy vessels, was much improved in 1836, and it has since been lengthened and considerably improved. It is almost on a line with Main-street, the other stretches from Shore-street, and there is a third quay on the opposite side of the loch, adjoining that part of the town called Dalintober.

Campbeltown formerly derived great advantage from the herring fishery, for which it was particularly famed, but since the withdrawal of the bounty it has somewhat decayed, few vessels being now engaged in the trade. The staple at the present time is distilling whisky, and in this branch nineteen firms are engaged, producing an article inferior perhaps to none in the kingdom, chiefly for the Glasgow and English houses. Next in consequence, and mainly, if not entirely dependent for its prosperity on the last-named branch, is building. Agriculture of late years has risen into great importance. Some of the finest and driest land in the north of Scotland lies to the north and west of the town, and is chiefly the property of the Duke of Argyll and Hector Macneal, Esq. A small woollen manufactory, a colliery a net manufactory, rope walk, &c., add to the business importance of the place, whilst its neighbourhood abounds with lime, stone, &c. for building and other purposes. Few towns of the size of Campbeltown possess equal commercial advantages. The county building, situate on Castle-hill, is a fine stone building, in the baronial style. It contains a justice of the peace court, sheriff's court, and the fiscal's offices. It was opened June 1st, 1871, by James Gardiner, Esq., the old sheriff's court, &c. in Bolgam-street, being now converted into a volunteer orderly-room, drill room, and police station. There is also the custom house, an extensive excise establishment, and branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank, and the Royal Bank of Scotland. The three banks are thus situated, one in Main-street, and two in Longrow, besides a bank for savings in Bolgam-street, which was established in 1827, under the provisions of the Act 59 George 3, cap. 62. Steam vessels sail regularly to Glasgow, Greenock, and Ayr, and occasionally to the adjacent coast towns, and to Belfast, &c. in Ireland; and numerous coasting vessels freighted to Liverpool, and other more distant parts of the empire. The principal exports are whisky, wool, herrings, live stock, coals, potatoes, &c. The imports are timber, coals, grain, yeast, groceries, ironmongery, &c. Campbeltown is connected by telegraph with the principal towns and villages in the county, as well as with Glasgow, &c. The municipal government of the town is vested in a provost, two baillies, a dean of guild, and twelve councillors and, combined with Ayr, Inverary, Irvine and Oban, returns one member to the imperial parliament—the gentleman at present sitting being Sir William J. M. Cuninghame, Bart. The town is gas lighted, and the inhabitants are well supplied with water by pipes conducted from Crosshill into the principal streets. The town hall, a convenient building, ornamented with a handsone spire, contains a council chamber, and an assembly and other rooms. Campbeltown is the head quarters of the Argyll and Bute Artillery Militia, and a large and efficient staff are here permanently stationed; in the town are also an Artillery Volunteer Battery, and a Rifle Volunteer Corps.

PLACES OF WORSHIP, SCHOOLS, &c.—The Castlehill church, so called from its occupying the site of the ancient royal castle, was erected in 1781. The Gaelic church, so named from the language in which the service is performed, was built in 1807, and a beautiful stone spire added in 1836. The United Presbyterian church was erected 1767, and is ornamented with a handsome and substantial stone tower, in the Gothic style, raised in 1834. It was re-erected in 1871, and is now a splendid building, in the Italian style of architecture, with a large stone tower 150 feet from the ground. The Episcopal church, situated in Argyll-street, opened also in 1834, was at first occupied as a Secession church, but afterwards as a branch of the Scotch Episcopal church. There are two Free churches, one in Lochend, a beautiful stone edifice, and the other in Lorn-street, both of which have recently been rebuilt. The Roman Catholic chapel, opened in 1849, is a neat structure, with carved stone front and pinnacles, which gives it a rather imposing apperance. There are two schools of industry for girls; and the Dalintober boys' and girls' schools, endowed by a Miss Lucy Campbell, in 1843; also Board schools.

The most remarkable piece of antiquity is an ancient cross, erected in the middle of the main street. The inscription is in the Saxon character, and the following is a literal copy, with the translation annexed—

Haec est: crux: Domini: YVARI: M: H: EACHYRNA. quondam: Rectoris de KYREGAN. et: Domini: ANDRE: nati: ejus: Rectoris de KIL: COMAN: qui hanc crucem fieri faciebat: "This is the cross of Mr. Edward M.H.Eachran, once Rector of Cyregan, and Master Andrew his son, Rector of Kilcoman, who erected this cross."

There is, however, no date, but it is said to have been executed about the twelfth century, and to have been brought from the Isle of Iona. South of the town is the high mountain called Bengoelion, from which there is an extensive view of the neighbouring country, including the distant objects of Arran and Pladda islands, Cowan hills, the bay and heads of Ayr, the Lowlands as far as Loch Ryan, the Craig of Ailsa, Black head at the entrance of Belfast Lough, Donnavertie, Sanda Isles, part of the Irish coast near the points of Garron head, Red Bay and Fair head, the dangerous bay of Machrihanish, the Mull of Islay, and the Paps of Jura: also the cemetery at Kilkerran, with the points of Saddell, Carradell, and Skipness. The north and south shores of Campbeltown are both pleasant and healthy.

The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the first Thursday in February, for horses; the second last Wednesday in May, for horses and cattle; the Wednesday before the third Tuesday in August, for sheep and lambs; and on the second Thursday in the same month for horses; the Friday before Kilmichael market in October, for cattle; and the third Thursday in November, for horses. Population of Campbeltown in 1871, 6,688.

SALT-PANS, so called from salt having been made here from salt water, is a small village, six miles west of Campbeltown, on the southern shore of Machrihanish bay, the dashing of whose waves can be heard to a great distance; and the continual heavy swell here, caused by the Atlantic rolling in between Islay and the northern coast of Ireland, is justly dreaded by the mariner. Nearly half a mile south is "Losset House," the tasteful and modern mansion of Hector Macneal, Esq. of Ugadale. At Drumlemble, about four miles from Campbeltown, are the works of the Argyll Coal and Cannel Co. Limited. A branch railway is in course of construction from the colliery to the harbour to afford greater facilities for shipping. Here is a Board school

SADDELL and SKIPNESS form a united parish, situate at the inner extremity of the peninsula of Kintyre, the village of Saddell being about ten miles north of Campbeltown. It contains the ancient castle of Somerled, the great chieftain and founder of the clan Macdonald; and the ruins of a monastery, of the Cistercian order, founded by Somerled, in 1160. Saddell is now the residence of Miss Isabella M'Neill Campbell, whose mansion stands in a good situation in the centre of this fine glen. The ancient castle, which is still entire, and the ruins of the monastery, in which is the cemetery of the ancient Macdonald family, are well worthy of being visited by the curious. Population in 1871, Saddell, 645; Skipness, 500.

At CARRADALE, a village in the above parish, and five miles north of Saddell, a pier has been erected, where the steamer calls on its voyage to and from Glasgow and Campbeltown. A sub-post office and Board and Assembly schools are in the village.

POST OFFICE, Main-street, CAMPBELTOWN, John Muir, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts at six evening, and are despatched thereto on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, from middle of September to middle of June (by steamer) at twenty minutes to eight morning, and on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday (via Tarbert) at six morning; and from the middle of June to the middle of September (by steamer) daily at twenty minutes before nine morning, Mondays excepted, when they are despatched at ten minutes past five morning.

CLACHAN, TAYINLOAN, KILLEAN, GLENBARR, BALLACHANTUIE, AND KILKENZIE,

WITH THE ISLANDS OF GIGHA, CARA, AND THEIR VICINITIES.

CLACHAN is a village in the parish of Kilcalmonell, situated in a fine valley on the banks of a small stream, over which is a good stone bridge, and on the road from Tarbert to Campbeltown, 11 miles S. of the former, and 26 N. of the latter place. In the village is the parish church, a chapel in which Free Church service is held, and a board school; and a little to the east is the residence of William M'Kinnon, Esq., of Balinakill, who is the proprietor of the village, and who has effected considerable improvements. In the vicinity, to the north-west, is a vitrified fort on a large scale, and another contiguous fortification in ruins; and among the hills to the east are several fresh water lochs, well stored with trout. Eight miles south, on the same road, and near the coast is

TAYINLOAN, a small village in the parish of Killean, about 19 miles from Campbeltown; about half a mile in a northern direction is Largie Castle, the residence of Charles Morton M'Donald, Esq., and opposite the village, but separated from the mainland by a sound about four miles broad, is the island of GIGHA, which is nearly six miles long, and from two to three miles broad, and is the property of J. W. Scarlett, Esq., of Achamore House. An Established church and a board school are in the island.

CARA, a neighbouring island, which is about one mile in length, is the property of Charles Morton M'Donald, Esq.

KILLEAN is about four miles south of Tayinloan. Near the road stands the parish church, a small neat stone building, erected in 1787, and the parochial school; and about a quarter of a mile further, on an eminence, is a handsome Free church, with a tower, erected in 1846, and situated close by is also a board school. Seals are very often seen lying on the rocks near the coast. Population in 1871 of the quoad sacra parish, 1,614. Nearly three miles south from Killean and twelve north of Campbeltown is the village of GLENBARR, situate on the banks of the Barr water, which is well stocked with fine salmon and trout, and nearly a mile from the shore, in a rich and well cultivated glen, is Barr House, the property of Keith Macalister, Esq., a fine structure, built in the Gothic style, and from its site an extensive view of the sea and north-east coast of Ireland may be obtained. Three miles south of Glenbarr and nine and a half north-west of Campbeltown, on the main road near the shore, is BALLACHANTUIE, a small village in the united parish of Killean and Kilkenzie, containing a small church, erected in 1825, and a board school. The road between this village and Campbeltown has been much improved of late years, and a new road several miles in length, was cut along the shore, at a great expense, to avoid the hills on the old road. The chief employment of the people on this coast is fishing and agriculture.

POST OFFICE, TAYINLOAN, Alexander Grant, Post Master.—Letters arrive from Campbeltown at nine morning, and are despatched thereto at half-past three afternoon. # DUNOON,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF KIRN, INNELLAN, GLENLEAN, SANDBANK, HUNTER'S QUAY, TOWARD, GLENDARUEL, TIGH-NA-BRUAICH, COLINTRAIVE, AND THE PARISHES OF INVERCHAOLAIN, KILFINAN, KILMODAN AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUNOON and KILMUN is a parish lying on the western shore of the Frith of Clyde; the town of Dunoon, a thriving little one, is the principal place in the district of Cowal; it was created, along with Kirn and Hunter's Quay, a borough in 1868; 27 miles S.S.E. of Inverary, 21 S.S.W. of Strachur, and 7 S. of Kilmun; 74 miles W. of Edinburgh, 30 W. of Glasgow, 10 N. of Rothesay, 8 W. of Greenock, and 4 W. of Gourock. Its prosperity may be mainly ascribed to the pleasant site it occupies, having in front the famed Frith of Clyde, always studded with numerous sailing and steam vessels. The town extends over considerable space along the shore. For a distance of two miles in both directions there are several ranges of genteel-looking and well-furnished houses for the accommodation of families who resort hither in the summer season for sea-bathing. Intermixed with the lodging-houses are many tasteful villas, chiefly occupied by the merchants and professionals of Glasgow, &c., for country retirement. There are also several good hotels; but that which deserves more particular notice is the Argyll Hotel, which has undergone considerable alterations by Mr. Alexander Gunn, the present proprietor. It is only since the year 1821 that Dunoon has become a place of resort for sea-bathing; at that time there were only three slated houses in the place, and the population did not number above 100. In 1835 a wooden pier was constructed, 300 feet long and twelve broad, with a projection nearly at right angles with the end, 90 feet long and 20 broad; this substantial and convenient work cost £1,500. About a mile distant, at KIRN, is another pier, similarly constructed; and two miles north-east is Hunter's Quay, a good stone building, with a projection and slip, erected in 1828. Here is the Royal Clyde Yacht Club House, in connection with which is an annual regatta on the Clyde. Nearly a mile further, at the entrance of Holy Loch, on its southern shore, is Hafton House, an elegant mansion; this seat occupies a pleasant and picturesque situation, amid thriving plantations and tastefully arranged pleasure grounds. In Holy Loch 1,500 vessels may ride in perfect safety, however boisterous the weather. A little to the west of the pier at Dunoon, is a cone-shaped green mound, about 80 feet in height, with the ruins of a castle on its summit; this castle was formerly regarded as one of the most formidable strongholds on the cost of Argyllshire, and has been the scene of many stirring events and feudal conflicts. Dunoon is not without its share in the history of Queen Mary, who visited her sister, Lady Jane Stuart, at Dunoon Castle about 1563.

The parish church was built in 1816, and considerably enlarged in 1835, containing at present nearly 900 sittings; it is a Gothic edifice, with a square tower, and stands on the most elevated point of Dunoon. It is said that there was once a nunnery on its site. The graves of Bishops Boyd and M'Lean are to be seen in the burial ground of the church, covered with massive freestone slabs, having upon them armorial bearings and inscriptions, which are, however, nearly obliterated. A Chapel of Ease to Dunoon was erected near Toward Lighthouse, 7 miles south-west, in 1836-7, by subscription; it is a neat Gothic structure, containing 200 sittings, and cost £400. In 1828, a United Presbyterian church was erected in Argyll street, with 300 sittings; but, this being found insufficient, a new one was erected at a short distance from the old one, in 1874, at a cost of about £8,000. The old church is now used for services in the Gaelic tongue. The foundation stone of a New Free church was laid in July, 1876, by Alexander Stephen, Esq., of Fearann Coille; it is built of stone, in the French Gothic style of architecture, and cost £10,000. Mr. Robt. A. Boyd, Glasgow, was the architect. A Scotch Episcopal church, and an English Episcopal church, also chapels each for Baptists and Roman Catholics—all neat buildings—are the other places of worship in the town and immediate neighbourhood. There are also several public schools, as well as private boarding and day schools. A police station has been built a little out of the town; it is a neat stone building in the early Scotch style of architecture. Two churches, one for the Establishment, the other for the United Presbyterians, are situated at KIRN. A short distance from the town, on the road from Dunoon to Sandbank, is the West of Scotland Convalescent Sea-side Homes. This institution, originated and promoted by Miss Beatrice Clugston, of Glasgow, was opened on the 14th of August, 1869, for the purpose of affording sea-air, bathing, &c., to those invalids whose circumstances prevent them from regaining in any other way the health and strength necessary to resume their work. This institution is a magnificent stone building in the Romanesque style of architecture; it was originally intended for a hydropathic establishment on an extensive scale, and cost about £11,000. The houses are two in number, capable of accommodating 115 inmates. The baths, with which the institution is furnished, were put up at a great expense by the former proprietor, and are acknowledged to be the best in Scotland. The Burgh Hall, Argyll street, built in 1873, is well worthy of mention; it is a handsome stone building, and contains a fine assembly room, which is sometimes occupied by London and provincial dramatic companies, &c. A sheriff and small debts court is held here once a quarter. A skating rink was erected near the pier in the summer of 1876; it is 118 feet long and 60 feet wide, and was built by Dixon & Co. Liverpool. The floor, which is of asphalte, was laid by Green & Son, Bedford. Fairs are held at Dunoon on the third Thursday in January, February, August and November. The population of the united parishes of Dunoon and Kilmun in 1871 was 7,132.

INNELLAN is a thriving and respectable village, five miles W. of Dunoon, on the shore of the Frith of Clyde. The houses are mostly of a first-class order, and the grounds adjoining being tastefully laid out, give them a neat appearance—many being the summer residences of the Glasgow merchants. There are four churches, an Established church, a Free church, an Episcopalian, and a United Presbyterian church, and a good school. The Royal Hotel, which deserves particular notice, is built on an elevated site; its dimensions are large and imposing. It stands second to none in this part of the country for its excellent accommodation. The proprietor is Mr. John Clark, late of the Pier Hotel, Ardenadam. In front is the pier, at which steamers to and from Glasgow call several times a day. A few miles further on is Castle Toward, a massive modern edifice, erected by the late Kirkman Finlay, Esq., and now the residence of his son, A. S. Finlay, Esq., late M.P. for Argyllshire. The grounds contain the ruins of the ancient castle, at one time the seat of the family of Lamont of Ardlamont. Population in 1871, 605.

GLENLEAN or CLACHAIG is a village in the parish of Dunoon, from 6 to 7 miles N.W. therefrom. There is a good school in the village, a post office, and a comfortable public house, the Clachaig Inn.

SANDBANK or ARDENADAM is a small but thriving village, 3 miles north-west of Dunoon, on the road to Kilmun. There are two churches in the village, one for the Establishment and the other a Free church. There is also a good school, and several respectable shopkeepers and traders, two or three good inns, but that which deserves more particular notice is the Pier Hotel, a fine stone building, from which a splendid view of the Holy Loch is obtained, and being close to the pier, at which steamers call several times a day, it affords great accommodation to parties travelling in this district. In 1871, Sandbank had a population of 620.

INVERCHAOLAIN, or INVERHALLAN, is a parish in Cowal district, between 4 and 5 miles S.E. of Dunoon, and is intersected by an arm of the sea called Loch Streven, running about eight miles into the county, the two sides of which present a sea coast of about three miles. The district is mountainous and pastoral. There is a church of the Establishment and a parochial school in the parish.

KILFINAN and KILMODAN are both parishes in Cowal district. There are churches of the Establishment and parochial schools at both places.

CLACHAN of GLENDARUEL is a village in the parish of Kilmodan, about 17 miles N.W. of Dunoon. An Established and a Free church, connected with each of which is a school, and a sub-post office, are in the village.

TIGH-NA-BRUAICH is a village in the parish of Kilfinan, pleasantly situated on the west bank of the Kyles of Bute. An Established and a Free church are in the village; there are likewise two good inns and a post office. Population in 1871, 404.

COLINTRAIVE is a small village in the parish of Inverchaolain, also situated in the Kyles of Bute. It contains an inn and sub-post office

EASDALE AND LUING,

SHUNA, TORSAY, BELNAHUA & FLADDA ISLANDS, WITH MELFORT, KILNINVER, KILMELFORT & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

EASDALE is a village, partly situated on the island of that name, and partly on the island of Seil, from which it is separated by a narrow sound; and in the united parish of KILBRANDON and KILCHATTAN; it is 16 miles S.W. by S. of Oban, 30 N.N.W. of Lochgilphead, 40 W. of Inverary, and 142 W. of Edinburgh. It is chiefly remarkable for its slate quarries, which are said to have been open for three centuries; they are the property of Earl Breadalbane, and are wrought by the Easdale Slate Company, who altogether employ about two hundred and fifty men, and produce about 15,000 tons of slate annually, of a superior quality, which is exported to all parts of Scotland and the north of England. Several of the quarries, which are now above two hundred and fifty feet below the sea, are kept dry by pumping with steam engines. The geological formation of the slate-rock here is similar, as to stratification and cleavage, to the Welch rock; and the island of Easdale, which is nearly a mile in circumference, is entirely formed of this rock, except a few trap dykes which here and there intersect it. There is a good quay for shipping the slate, and safe anchorage in the sound, through which the Glasgow steam boats pass almost daily to and from the north. A new pier was erected in 1873, at which the steamers call regularly. Ardmaddy Castle, an ancient seat of the Breadalbane family, about two miles east of Easdale, is situated in a fine pleasant bay; the grounds are well wooded and contain several pretty cascades; to the house a large portion has been recently added. A marble quarry was wrought near the castle about a century ago. Lead mines have been worked in the island of Luing; and there are several caves in Kilbride well worth visiting. In 1871 the village had a population of 504.

BELNAHUA, a small island to the north of Scarba, contains several quarries of excellent blue slate, at present wrought by Messrs. J. & H. Shaw & Co. The number of men generally employed is about sixty. Population in 1871, 146.

SHUNA is a small island lying off the coast of Nether Lorn, in Kilbrandon parish, situated 14 miles S.S.W. of Oban. FLADDA, LUING, and TORSAY are also small islands in the above parish.

MELFORT is a village, pleasantly situated at the head of Loch Melfort, a mile off the high road, and in the united parish of Kilninver and Kilmelfort. It is about 8 miles S.E. of Easdale, and 15½ of Oban. The manufacture of gunpowder was carried on in the village, eight mills being employed for that purpose, but on the property changing hands recently the powder works were closed. There is a convenient quay for the use of shipping. There is a public school in the village, under the charge of Kilninver and Kilmelfort School Board.

KILNINVER and KILMELFORT form a united parish in Lorn district, lying on the west coast to the south of Kilmore. The Kilmelfort part of the parish lies south of Kilninver. There are public schools at both the above places, and a church of the Establishment at Kilninver. Population in 1871, 759.

INVERARY,

WITH FURNACE, STRACHUR, LOCHGOILHEAD, CAIRNDOW, CLADICH, DALMALLY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INVERARY is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the county town of Argyllshire, 102 miles W. by N. of Edinburgh, 60 N.W. of Glasgow, 32 S.E. of Oban, by Port Sonachan Ferry, and 42 by Dalmally, avoiding the ferry, 20 S.E. of Bonaw by the before mentioned ferry, but 32 by the coach road and Dalmally, 24 N.E of Lochgilphead, and 76 N.N.E. of Campbeltown. It is delightfully situated on the north-western shore of Loch Fyne, on a point of land (Ardreanich, or the Fern Point), forming a southern point of a fine bay, which receives the waters of the Aray and the Shira; over the first is an elegant stone bridge of two arches, within half a mile of the town; the second is about a mile and a half east, and is crossed by a bridge of one arch. From the former of these streams the town derives its name, "Inver" signifying the mouth—from its proximity to the mouth of the "Aray." A short distance from the town, at the extremity of the bay, stands Inverary Castle, the princely residence of the Duke of Argyll. The architecture of this mansion is highly finished Gothic, with turrets at the angles, and its site is particularly beautiful and commanding. From its southern front there is an expansive view for several miles down Loch Fyne, and of the adjacent lofty mountains, which are adorned with fine plantations to their summits. A square pavilion, rising high above its turrets, supplies light to a gallery (which leads to all the upper chambers), and a spacious hall, furnished with an elegant organ, and decorated with the arms used by the Argyllshire militia in 1741, also the colours of the 93rd Highlanders. Amongst the paintings are those of the earl who was executed in the reign of Charles II., and also the marquis who suffered in that of James VII. of Scotland. The drawing room and some other apartments are lined with rich and costly tapestry of rare designs, indeed the whole interior is fitted and furnished in sumptuous style. The castle also contains two beautiful pedestals of red granite, or porphyry, of a very rare kind, discovered by the present duke, near the Ross of Mull: two slabs were sent to Aberdeen and converted into pedestals, in forming which it was found to be much superior and to take a higher polish than either the Peterhead or the Aberdeen granite. The Duke of Sutherland subsequently procured a considerable quantity for the internal improvements of Dunrobin Castle. On entering the bay, the castle has a very majestic appearance, and the woods, that rising for a considerable distance adorn the domain, give the town an appearance of grandeur. Every stranger is struck with the neatness of the town, which, though small, is well-built. The park and grounds of the castle present a drive, almost in a direct line, of about two miles, with several others of great extent, all thrown open to the public. Upon the lawn is a brass gun that belonged to the admiral's ship Florida, one of the "Invincible armada," blown up in the Tobermory bay in 1588, where she was forced to put in through stress of weather. The gun, which was taken from the bay, is about ten feet in length, is named the "Gunna-a-Cam," and is fired on certain occasions.

Loch Fyne terminates about nine miles from the town, and from the fineness of its scenery, and the richness of its herrings, is justly remarkable. The value of herrings taken out of the loch in a single season, until within the last twenty-one years, frequently amounted to £30,000, but of late years it has hardly yielded any, and the scarcity is supposed to have been the results of dredging. In prosperous seasons there were at times from three hundred to four hundred boats employed at once on its waters. The loch is fifty miles long, and is about ten broad below Loch Gilp, seldom exceeding three above Otterferry. From a convenient part of the town, and projecting from the shore, is a well-built quay. In the town are two branch banks—one of the National Bank of Scotland, the other of the Union Bank of Scotland, and two good hotels and posting houses. There is daily communication with Glasgow throughout the year, by means of steamers across Loch Fyne to St. Catherine's, and also by Hutcheson & Co.'s steam boats which sail three times a week.

Inverary was erected into a burgh by charter, granted by Charles I. in 1648, and its government is vested in a provost, two baillies, a dean of guild, with eight councillors, a town clerk, and a treasurer. The burgh unites with Campbeltown and Oban in this county, and with Ayr and Irvine in Ayrshire, in sending one member to parliament. Sir William J. M. Cuninghame is the present representative, and for the county the Marquis of Lorne. The court house and gaol, forming a substancial building of stone, is situate on the shore, and has an imposing appearance when seen from the loch. In it a sheriff's court is held every Friday from 15th January to 15th March, from 3rd or 4th April to 31st July, and from 1st October to 15th December, and quarter sessions on the first Tuesday in March, May, August, and last Tuesday in October; also a borough court occassionally.

On the esplanade may be seen a sculptured stone cross, supposed to be of the date 1400; it is eight feet high, and bears the following inscription—"Haec est crux nobilium virorum, vidilicet, Dondcani Meic Gyllichomghan, Patrici filii ejus, et Maelmore, filii Patrici, qui hanc crucem fieri faciebet." The cross was brought from Iona. In a green near the church, is a small obelisk, which marks the place of execution, in the year 1685, of some persons of the name of Campbell, for preaching against the errors of the Romish church. A spendid view can be had of the surrounding scenery from the top of "Dunquiaich," which was in olden times a beacon or watch-tower, mentioned in Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Legend of Montrose."

The places of worship are the Established church, a neat stone building, surmounted by a spire, situated in the main street, and in which service is performed both in Gaelic and English; a United Presbyterian church, erected in 1836 on land given by D. Paterson, Esq.; a neat Free church, built in 1844, at the south end of the town; and an Episcopalian church. There are also Board schools here. About a mile and a half north-east of Inverary is Glen-Shira, in length about six miles, the scenery through which is exceedingly beautiful—presenting gently-sloping hills, whose sides are clothed with wood and rich meadow land, intersected with winding stream and lake (Duloch), the whole furnishing a landscape of no ordinary beauty. Fairs for cattle are held at Inverary on the last Friday in May, and the last Thursday in October, and a wool market on the third Friday in July. At Glenorchy, on third Wednesday in March, and fourth Tuesday in November. At Strachur, for cattle, last Saturday in May, and for cattle, sheep and horses the first Tuesday in October. Population in 1871, 984.

LOCHGOILHEAD with KILMORICH is a united parish in Cowal district, situated eight miles from Inverary, at the head of Loch Goil, between Lochs Fyne and Long. The place is mountainous and chiefly pastoral. CAIRNDOW is a hamlet in this parish. Population in 1871, 759.

CLADICH is a hamlet on Loch Awe, ten miles north of Inverary, and in the united parish of Glenorchy and Inishail; a road to the left leads to Port Sonachan Ferry, three miles distant, crossing Loch Awe, by which the distance to Bonaw and Oban is shortened ten miles; another road from Cladich on the right leads to Dalmally, and round the head of Loch Awe to Oban.

DALMALLY, 16 miles N.E. of Inverary, is beautifully situated near the head of Loch Awe, and in the view of the vale of Glenorchy. The parish church is situated on the road to Oban, a Free church is also close by, also a Board school. Loch Awe is twenty-six miles long and from one to half a mile broad; its most attractive scenery lies between here and Port Sonachan, the hills on each side being thickly clothed with timber, and several small islands interspersed on its surface. On a rock are the fine old ruins of Kilchurn Castle, supposed to have been built about 1440, by Sir Colin Compbell, the first knight of Glenorchy. There is a good hotel and posting-house here. A railway station is in course of erection here on the Stirling and Callandar Railway, where it terminates.

At FURNACE, about eight miles south of Inverary, on the western bank of Loch Fyne, are extensive granite quarries, leased and wrought by Messrs. William Sim & Co.

At GOATFIELD, in the vicinity of Furnace, an establishment for the manufacture of gunpowder has been in successful operation for some years.

STRACHUR is a village, on the eastern bank of Loch Fyne, five miles south of Inverary, in the united parish of Strachur and Strathlachlan. The parish church is in the village, as well as a Free church, and a Board School. Population of the united parish in 1871, 867.

ISLAND OF ISLAY,

INCLUDING BOWMORE, BRIDGE-END, PORT-ASKAIG, PORT-CHARLOTTE, PORT-ELLEN, ARDREY, PORTNAHAVEN, BALLEGRANT AND THEIR VICINITIES.

ISLAY is a large island, and the most southerly of those called the Hebrides. In length from north to south it is about thirty miles, and its extreme land-breadth about eighteen, its contents about 154,000 acres. Askaig, the most northern port on the island, is distant from Edinburgh (by way of Tarbert) 179 miles, from Inverary 76, and from Tarbert 40. It lies in a westerly direction from the peninsula of Kyntire, distant from it about twelve miles, and is separated on the north, from the Island of Jura, by a narrow channel. It comprises three parochial divisions, namely, Bowmore (or Kilharrow), Kilchoman and Kildalton. The mountains to the east of the island rise to an altitude of fifteen hundred feet, and are the resort of eagles, falcons and other birds; and great numbers of seals are to be found along the coast. The shore is very rugged, but in some parts has fine flat shores and sandy bays, and the face of the country is finely varied by hill and dale. Many parts are well planted, and the island contains several beautiful lakes, well-stocked with most delicious trout, together with the rivers Sorn and Laggan: the former empties itself into Loch Indaal, and the latter into Laggan Bay. The Laggan water is not surpassed in the West Highlands as a salmon stream. In boisterous weather many vessels come into Loch Indaal for shelter. Near the centre of the island is Loch Finlaggan, about three miles in circumference, with an islet of the same name in the middle. It was here the Macdonalds (Lord of the Isles) resided in all the pomp of royalty, and the ruins of their castle can yet be seen. Near the Island of Finlaggan is another little isle called Eilan-na-corlle—the island of council—where a body of judges constantly sat to decide differences between the subjects of the Macdonalds. On the first island were buried the wives and the children of the Lords of the Isles, but their own persons were deposited in the more sacred ground of Iona. Before Islay became the seat of government for the Lords of the Isles, it appears to have been under the dominion of the Danes and Norwegians, as there are many duns and castles, evidently of Danish origin, besides many places which have Danish names. The land is tolerably cultivated, but it is still susceptible of great improvement. Upwards of three thousand head of black cattle, and several hundred horses, peculiarly adapted for small carriages, are annually exported, besides sheep. An immense quantity of whisky, the produce of the distilleries in the island, is also exported to Glasgow, England and America. Lead and iron are said to abound in this island, and a company was at one time formed, called the Islay Mining Company, for extracting some of those minerals; the undertaking, however, proved abortive, and the company was dissolved. There is a regular weekly communication by steamer, from Port-Ellen and Port-Askaig, with Glasgow and West Tarbert on the main land. There are many ruinous remains of ancient castles, churches, &c. scattered over the island; but, perhaps, the most remarkable natural curiosity in this part of the empire is Sloc-Mhacl-Doraidh, a large basin formed in the rock by the action of the sea, on the south-west point of Laggan Bay, about nine miles from Bowmore, into which the turbulent waters of the western ocean rush, by two channels in the rock, covered with natural arches; the grandeur of the scene presented during the flowing of the tide is inconceivable; this cave is scarcely inferior to the famed one of Fingal, in Staffa, and can only be entered by a boat in fine weather. At the entrance stands a perpendicular rock, fifty feet high, with a belt round it, and is designated the "soldier," from appearing to guard the approach to it. The interior is dome-roofed and spacious, with a beautiful lake of fresh water, "icy cold and crystal clear." There are several other interesting perforations in different parts of the island. The scenery in this locality, as well as several other points of the island, is highly interesting, and occasionally approaches the sublime. It was on this coast, in the vicinity of the last named cave, that on the 27th of April, 1847, the Exmouth was wrecked, when two hundred and forty-eight of the crew and passengers perished. Population of Islay in 1871, 8,143.

BOWMORE is the principal place on the island. It was founded in 1768, and is situated on the east side of Loch Indaal, three miles south of Islay House, 11 s.s.w. from Port-Askaig, and the same from Port-Ellen and Port-Charlotte. The town, which consists of two principal streets, and several smaller ones diverging, possesses a good quay and a comfortable inn. It is a place of some business, several trading vessels belonging to it. The public structures are the parish church, a circular edifice, with a peculiar formed spire; a neat Free church, a Baptist chapel, a union workhouse, and a building originally intended for a gaol, but now appropriated to the more beneficial uses of a public library, containing about eighteen hundred volumes. An assembly room is on the same floor as the library. There is also a large and excellent parochial school, with a house for the master, built and liberally endowed by Campbell of Islay, likewise a Free church school. A sheriff's court is held here twice a year. There is a distillery worked by W. & J. Mutter. The Bowmore Hotel is the principal one in the town. Population in 1871, 867.

At BRIDGE-END, three miles north of Bowmore, and eight miles south of Port-Askaig, is a branch of the National Bank of Scotland, which greatly facilitates the commercial transactions of the island. A court is held monthly for the recovery of small debts, and sessions for the trial of petty offences. A short distance to the west stands Islay House, surrounded with fine gardens and well planted grounds; it is situated at the head of Loch Indaal, of which it commands a fine view, as well as of the adjacent country.

PORT-ASKAIG is a small creek or harbour, on the north-east side of the island, opposite Feoline in Jura, from which it is separated by the sound of Islay, about a mile broad; the port is eleven miles north-east of Bowmore, and is the only quay on the island where vessels of considerable burden can load and unload at low water. Here lobsters are found in great abundance.

About four miles from Bridge-end, on the road to Port-Askaig, is the village of BALLEGRANT, where there is a lead mine, which gives employment to a number of hands. The lead is of first-rate quality, and contains a small quantity of silver.

PORT-CHARLOTTE is a small village, in the parish of Kilchoman, on the west side of Loch Indaal, nearly opposite to Bowmore; it is 16 miles s.w. of Port-Askaig, and contains a good inn, a distillery, and an excellent school, erected by Charles Morrison, Esq. Population in 1871, 484.

PORT-ELLEN is a seaport and village, in the parish of Kildalton, on the east side of the island; 11 miles s.e. of Bowmore, and 22 s. of Port-Askaig. In 1824 there stood only one house here, though in 1836 there were above one hundred and fifty; and the population and habitations have greatly increased since. The bay is considered safe, and is nearly a mile wide. The quay is commodious, and is formed on a rocky promontory near the middle of the harbour; the quay was erected in 1826, and enlarged and improved in 1832, by Campbell of Islay, who also erected a lighthouse. A branch of the City of Glasgow Bank is established here. The village is substantially built, and contains two inns. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and fishing, and the prosperity of the village may be said to have been increasing for several years. Population in 1871 was 979.

PORTNAHAVEN is a small village and seaport, 24 miles s.w. of Port-Askaig, and 16 s.w. of Bridge-end. It is at the southern extremity of the island, having a quay formed by the rocks on the shore; and near the port is an elegant lighthouse, erected in 1824-5. Here is also a parliamentary church and a parochial school. A considerable business is done in the season of fishing, the shores on this part of the island abounding with the finny treasures. Population in 1871, 411.

The fairs held in the Island of Islay, are as follows:—for cattle, last Wednesday in April, last Tuesday in June, July, August and September. At Bowmore, February, Tuesday, if 12th, or first Tuesday after; August 12th, if Friday, or first Friday after, for horses; last Tuesday in August for cattle, November for horses, Friday, if 12th, or first Friday after; for cattle, Tuesday before. At Bridge-end, for cattle and horses, Tuesday before second last Wednesday in October. At Ballegrant, for horses, Tuesday in February, after that at Bowmore. At Port-Askaig, for cattle, second last Wednesday in May. At Port-Ellen, for horses and cattle, in November, day before that at Bowmore.

THE ISLE OF JURA,

WITH THOSE OF COLONSAY, GARVELLOCH, LUNGA, ORANSAY AND SCAREA, WITH MILLTOWN VILLAGE.

JURA, an island of the Hebrides, is thirty-three miles long, and from two to ten miles broad, separated from Knapdale on the western coast of Scotland, by the sound of Jura (ten miles broad), and from the island of Islay, to the south, by the sound of Islay (about a mile broad), and, with the other islands, forms the united parish of Jura and Colonsay. Jura belongs to Richard Denison Campbell, Esq., whose residence is at Ardfin, a respectable mansion on the south shore of the island. It is the most rugged of the Western Isles, being composed chiefly of huge rocks piled one on another in the utmost disorder. The west side of the island is wild and rugged, intersected by numerous torrents, which come rushing down from the mountains. The inhabitants live all on the east side of the island. The most remarkable objects in the isle are the Paps of Jura, an eminence nearly 2,500 feet above the level of the sea; they are three in number, standing on the same ridge, but having two valleys separating them, the tops are round, and consist for some distance down the sides of loose stones, rendering the ascent difficult; the southern one is called "Benachaolais" (the Mountain of Sound), the next and highest, "Benanoir" (the Mountain of Gold), the third "Benshianta" (the Consecrated Mountain.) There are five of these conical peaks, but only three of them are distinguished as the Paps. Corrabhain (the steep peak) is the most precipitous, but lowest of the cluster. The island also contains several caves, one of them is so large that it is said a regiment of soldiers might perform their exercise in its spacious arena. To the north of the island, in a strait, nearly a mile broad, separating the island of Scarba from Jura, is the gulf of Correy Vrecken, where the rush of waters is so great during the ebbing of the tide, as to form a terrible whirlpool, the noise of which can be heard for many miles. The red deer abound in the upland of this island. Fairs are held on the second last Friday in May, Friday after last Tuesday in June, Friday after last Thursday in July, and the second last Friday in October, all for cattle. Population in 1871, 761.

COLONSAY, a rather high rocky island, to the west of Jura, twelve miles long, and about three broad, is the property of Duncan M'Neill, Esq., of Colonsay, who has a good mansion house on the island of Killorran. The ruinous sacred building, and the numerous inscriptions on the grave-stones covering the ashes of the illustrious dead, are considered by many almost equal to those found on the island of Iona. Population in 1871, 498.

GARVELLOCH, or HOLY ISLAND, contains an extensive old fort, called Dunconnel, once a stronghold belonging to the Lords of the Isles, and in one of them, called the Nun's Island, are considerable remains of an old nunnery, said to have been founded by Saint Columbus. Population in 1871, 10.

ORANSAY, a small island to the south of Colonsay, contains the residence of the late Captain Alexander M'Neill, who was one of the many that perished in the melancholy shipwreck of the Orion steamer, off Portpatrick, in 1850.

MILLTOWN, frequently called Craighouse, the principal village in Jura, is eight miles from Port-Askaig ferry. It has a good quay, and the harbour, which is large and formed by several small islands, has obtained the appellation of Small Isles Harbour. About half a mile north of the village is the parish church and a parochial school. The village contains a distillery, a comfortable inn, and a corn mill.

KILMUN,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF STRONE, BLAIRMORE, ARDENTINNY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KILMUN, formerly the capital of a parish of the same name, now incorporated with that of Dunoon, is a pleasant, thriving village, and of late years has acquired no little notice as a place resorted to for sea bathing; it is situated on the north shore of Holy Loch, 22 miles S.E. of Inverary, 16 S.E. of Strachur, 7 S. of Dunoon, 30 W. of Glasgow, and 8 W. of Greenock. This place may be almost said to owe its origin to the late proprietor, David Napier, Esq., for, previously to attracting his notice, there where very few houses, whereas it is now a respectable village, having many handsome dwellings, occupied as summer residences by opulent merchants and professionals of Glasgow. There are also several pleasant and well furnished lodging-houses. Holy Loch is full three miles long; at its entrance it is scarcely a mile wide, but within it expands to a fine sheet of water, extending a mile and a half in width; at its head it receives the lesser and greater Echaig—the latter river flows from Loch Eck, a beautiful fresh water lake, seven miles long and one broad, whose steep rugged shores, rising to a considerable height, form a striking contrast on a fine day to its wide placid waters. Both the loch and the two rivers before mentioned afford plenty of sport to the angler, and the ride through the valley to Strachur or Loch Fyne is seldom exceeded for wild and sublime scenery. The quay, which was constructed by Mr. Napier, before mentioned, in 1829, will admit the steam boats alongside at all times of the tide. The quarantine station for the Clyde was formerly opposite this village. Of the ancient history of Kilmun little is known; but its old church, the mausoleum of the ducal family of Argyll, and especially the tower of the original church, evidence it to have been in former times a place of some note. Near the church of Kilmun stands a square and delapidated tower, which, as if to avert further decay, nature has covered with a mantle of ivy, which hangs in graceful festoons from its mouldering walls. In the church is the sepulchre of the Argyll family, which contains the mortal remains of six dukes and two duchesses. Near the sepulchre are statues of a lady and of an armed warrior, supposed to be Donnacha-au-aidh, or Fortunate Duncan; and suspended above are sundry warlike habiliments in a state of decay. Population of Kilmun in 1871, 320.

STRONE, a small village which nearly joins Kilmun, has greatly improved within the last few years, and many respectable lodging-houses and shops have been built, besides the erection of two churches. There is also a new quay, which will admit steamers alongside at all hours of the tide.

PORTINSTUCK, or BLAIRMORE, a few miles further, on the west shore of Loch Long, is a small but improving village of recent erection. There is a neat wooden pier erected here.

ARDENTINNY, another small village about five miles higher up on the loch, is situated in a beautiful vale, and celebrated for the picturesque scenery its neighbourhood affords. There is a neat stone church here.

LOCHGILPHEAD,

ARDRISHAIG, BELLANACH, KILMARTIN, KILMICHAEL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LOCHGILPHEAD is a thriving burgh, pleasantly situated at the northern extremity or head of Loch Gilp, from which the name is derived. It is 125 miles w. of Edinburgh, 51 N. of Campbeltown, 24½ s.w. of Inverary, 13½ N. of Tarbert, and 8 s. of Kilmartin. The town is of comparatively modern erection, and its site contained only two or three fishermen's huts at the commencement of the present century; it now consists of several well-formed streets—the foot-paths of which are well paved, an the inhabitants are plenteously supplied with water from a reservoir constructed by the burgh commissioners. The streets are lighted by gas supplied by a joint stock company, whose pipes extend from the Asylum at Lochgilphead to beyond Ardrishaig—a distance of four miles. Lochgilphead was constituted a burgh under the Act 13 and 14 Victoria, cap. 33, and is governed by nine commissioners of police, including one senior and two junior magistrates appointed under the provisions of the said Act. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and fishing, others are engaged in a woollen cloth manufactory and dye works established here some time. Meetings of the Argyll prison, police, and lunacy boards are held at stated periods, also monthly meetings of the South Argyll district road trustees and of the local justices, and a sheriff's small debt court is held quarterly. Lochgilphead is rapidly improving; in front of the main street a part of the loch has been embanked, and a piece of ground made for the convenience of the large cattle fairs or markets. The town is connected by numerous excellent roads with all parts of the county, and a line of telegraph also connects it with Campbeltown, Inverary, Oban, the Islands of Mull and Islay, &c., and Glasgow. A cloth manufactory and a carding mill are worked by water power from a stream passing to the north of the town. On the Kilmory side is a quay for the accommodation of the small craft engaged in the herring fishery.

Besides the parliamentary church, which was built at the head of Argyll street, in 1827-8, there is a Baptist chapel in the same street, a Reformed Presbyterian church, now Martyrs' Free church, in Union street, a Free church in Lochnell street, and there was erected in 1852, on the north side of the town, a handsome Scotch Episcopal cathedral church—the latter is a neat building in the decorated Gothic style of architecture, and consists of a nave and chancel; the windows of the chancel are of stained glass, with figure of Our Saviour and the arms of Argyll and the Isles—and a residence for the Bishop of Argyll and the Isles. There are also Board schools here. The site commands an extensive view of Loch Fyne to Arran and the varied and beautiful scenery around. A commodious court-house and a jail have been built. The Argyll and Bute district asylum, which has been considerably enlarged, and is now capable of containing 300 persons, is situated on the hill overlooking the town, and a combination poor-house has also been erected there. The Crinan canal passes a few hundred yards to the west of the town, and separates it from Auchendarroch, the residence of Alexander Campbell, Esq., on whose property the greater part of the town is built. A mile to the south-east is Kilmory House, the seat of Sir John Powlett Orde, Bart.; the house, surrounded with its well-wooded grounds, forms a conspicuous and interesting feature in the landscape from all parts of the loch, especially from Ardrishaig, which is nearly opposite. Ten miles north-west is Duntroon Castle, the property of John Malcolm, Esq. of Poltalloch, who possesses extensive demesnes in this part of the county, and on whose estate above two thousand acres of soft peat moss, at the head of Loch Crinan, have been converted into excellent corn and grazing land; the farm is appropriately called "Experiment." Calton Mor, the elegant residence of this gentleman, erected at a cost of about £200,000, overlooks the fertile plain which has been thus reclaimed.

Fairs are held on the third Thursday in March for horses; on the second Wednesday after the last Wednesday in May, and the second Wednesday after the last Wednesday in October for black cattle, and on the second Thursday after the fourth Thursday in November for horses. Population in 1871, 1,642.

ARDRISHAIG is two miles south; its inhabitants are chiefly engaged in fishing and curing herrings, and in the transit trade which connects the Western Highlands with Glasgow and the other ports on the Clyde. This place may be said to be the port to Lochgilphead, with which it is now nearly joined. In addition to a protective pier of 400 yards in length, with a small lighthouse at its extremity, a commodious low water pier and slip within the harbour, with a depth of seven feet, were erected in 1837 by the government commissioners of the Crinan canal. This canal extends from Ardrishaig to Crinan, a distance of ten miles, and affords the means of obviating a boisterous voyage of forty leagues round the Mull of Kintyre. Steam packets pass the canal on their way from Glasgow to all parts of the western coast, and by the Caledonian canal to Inverness. Here is an Established church, also a Free church, and an Episcopal and Board school. The Ardrishaig Hotel is the principal one in the neighbourhood. Many excellent sites for villas are along the coast, several have already been built on, and some villas are let furnished as summer quarters, the increased communication with the south making it a favourite coast residence. Population in 1871, 1,177.

BELLANACH is a small village, about five miles w. of Lochgilphead, situated in a glen on the southern bank of the Crinan canal, which here forms a fine triangular sheet of water, and terminates at Crinan, about a mile further west. The village contains a sub-post office and a Board school.

KILMARTIN, a small village eight miles north of Lochgilphead, contains a comfortable inn, a Board school, a parish church and a Free church. About two miles to the east is the mansion of Calton Mor, the residence of John Malcolm, Esq., of Poltalloch; about a quarter of a mile more distant, standing on a prominent rock facing Loch Crinan, is Duntroon Castle, and within four miles of the last named are the beautiful ruins of Carnazarie Castle—formerly the residence of the bishops of Argyll. Eleven miles west of Kilmartin, by a circuitous road, is Craignish Castle, the residence of Charles F. T. Gascoygne, Esq., of Craignish. At BARBRECK is the handsome mansion and demesne of Vice-Admiral Colin Yorke Campbell. Fairs are held at Kilmartin on the first Thursday in March, for horses, and the fourth Thursday in November, for horses and hiring servants. A prize show, in connection with the Poltalloch Farming Society, is held here for cattle, sheep and horses, in September.

KILMICHAEL-GLASSARY, at one time a burgh of considerable repute, now a small hamlet, is a parish situated about midway between Lochgilphead and Kilmartin. The parish church and manse of Glassary are here. A Board school, a market stance, and a good inn are at BRIDGEND, on the river Add, half a mile west of Kilmichael. Between Kilmichael and Kilmartin there are numerous druidical remains. Two large and much frequented fairs are held here annually, at which from seven to eight thousand head of black cattle are generally exposed for sale—namely, on the last Wednesday in May, which is also for horses and sheep, and the last Tuesday before the last Wednesday in October—at both of which fairs the hiring of servants takes place.

OBAN AND ITS VICINITY.

OBAN is a modern neat town and sea-port in the parish of Kilbride, 186 miles W.N.W. from Edinburgh, 92 from Glasgow, 40 S.S.W. of Fort William, 32 W.N.W. of Inverary, over Port Sonachan ferry (42 by coach road via Dalmally), and 30 S.E. of Tobermory. To visit Staffa and Iona hence, going round the Island of Mull, the voyage is about 120 miles, and it is about the same distance to Portree in Syke. The town enjoys a beautiful situation on the west coast of Mid Lorn district, and at the head of a fine bay, formed by the island of Kerrara in front, having an entrance at each end. The bay is from twelve to twenty fathoms deep, is well sheltered by lofty mountains, and large enough to anchor with convenience a large number of merchantmen. There are two quays, that on the north was enlarged and improved in 1863, and that on the south in 1876. The imports of Oban consist chiefly of merchandise from Glasgow, Liverpool and Ireland, and its principal exports are whiskey and wool. The municipal government of the town is vested in two baillies, four councillors and a town clerk, and Oban is contributary with the burgns of Ayr, Campbeltown, Inverary and Irvine in returning one member to parliament. The court house and police station, comprised in one building, is a handsome erection situated in Argyll-square. In it is held a sheriff's court once a quarter, a justice of peace court for small debts the first Friday of every month, and a police and burgh court on the first Monday of every month. A quarry of excellent freestone was some years since opened, about four miles south on the shore of Loch Feochan. The town is divided by a small river, the west side belonging to Robert Macfie, Esq., of Airds, that on the north to A. W. M'Dougall, Esq., of Battlefield, and Colonel M'Dougall, of Dunollie. In the eastern division is the parish church, erected in 1821. St. John's Scotch Episcopal church, a neat Gothic edifice, with beautiful stained glass windows, capable of seating 200, was erected by subscription, for the accommodation of the numerous visitors, at a cost of about £1,700, and was consecrated in September, 1864, by the Bishop of London. The Bishop of the diocese and trustees are the patrons. In Tweedle-street is an Independent chapel, built in 1820, capable of accommodating 500. A handsome Free church occupies a commanding site in the rear of the town. St. Columba church (Established), George-street, is a handsome structure, with a spire 120 feet high, erected in 1875. The United Presbyterian church, in the neighbourhood of St. John's, was erected in 1866. To the south of the town, a union poorhouse has been erected, and was opened in 1862 for the reception of the poor of the several parishes in the district of Lorn; it embraces all necessary accommodation, and with the ground, covers an area of three acres. Oban and its vicinity offer many inducements both to the tourist and antiquarian. Among the antiquities may be particularly noticed the ruins of Dunollie Castle, situated a mile north of the town, and three miles distant is Dunstaffnage Castle—the latter formerly belonged to the powerful Lord of Lorn, and was demolished by Robert Bruce, in retaliation for the injuries inflicted upon him and his followers, after crossing Loch Lomond on his way to Ireland, by that noble. In the chapel of the castle is a remarkable echo. Three miles to the south, on the Ardrishaig road, there is the "Serpent Mound," at the end of Loch Nell, which has attracted much attention from antiquarians. Six miles to the north, on the opposite side to Loch Etive, are the ruins of Berigonium, the ancient metropolis of Caledonia, and two miles further north is Balcaldine Castle. From a hill on the Island of Kerrara may be seen the distant objects of Duart Castle in Mull, Lady Rock, Ardtornish Castle in Morven, the Castle of Aros, the Castle of Gylen, Ben Cruachan, Ben Nevis, the Glencoe mountains, Easdale, Luing, &c. The tourist will be well rewarded for his trouble in visiting this place, as it is acknowledged to be the finest view in Scotland. In visiting the castles, &c. the antiquarian will find much gratification, all of them having been the residences of the ancient Scotch nobles, and even their present appearance exhibiting proofs of their former state and grandeur. Oban may also be said to rank among the most pleasant summer retreats in the Highland of Scotland. Its situation for bathing is extremely good, and it possesses every accommodation for the convenience of the great number of fashionable and wealthy visitors who are constantly calling here in the summer, on their way to the fine scenery on the western coast, and in Syke, and to the far-famed islands of Staffa and Iona, imparting a liveliness and interest to the appearance of the town. The inhabitants of Oban endeavour to imitate the manners and conversation of the visitors, which causes much better English to be spoken, and far more politeness and urbanity of manners to be displayed here than in many other places on this coast. Much improvement has been effected of late years, and in addition to the public buildings already noticed, many handsome villa residences may be seen on the hill behind the town; modern shops and warehouses are also superseding the old. An act of parliament was obtained in 1865 by the Callander and Oban Railway Company, for the construction of a line from Callander to this town, so as to connect it by a direct line of communication with the Lowlands; it is now completed as far as Dalmally. The length of the intended line is 70 miles, which, when complete, will contribute much to the prosperity of both town and neighbourhood. Steam boats ply between Glasgow, Greenock, Inverness, Mull, Staffa and Iona five or six times a week in summer, to Skye and Stornoway twice a week, and to other places further north once a fortnight during the season, also to Ireland The coach service is likewise constant and regular. Fairs and markets: for cattle, on the Monday and Tuesday before the last Wednesday in May, and the Friday and Saturday before the last Wednesday in October; for sheep and wool, on the Wednesday after Inverness July market; for horses, on the Tuesday before fourth Thursday in March, September and November; and for hirings April and October. At CONNELL on Monday before the last Wednesday in May, and on Friday before the last Wednesday in October. Population of Oban in 1871, 2,426.

SOUTHEND

Is a parish situated at the southern extremity of the peninsula of Kintyre—the village, which is sometimes called Newton Argyll, is 10 miles south of Campbeltown. Agriculture and fishing are the predominating occupations of the inhabitants, who, in the summer, reap some advantage from the visits of many strangers to this romantic and interesting part of the country. About half a mile south of the village stands the rock Dounavertie, a spot interesting to the historian and the antiquarian, as having been the scene of many sanguinary conflicts, with the details of which the intelligent villagers are conversant—especially the ruthless massacre of three hundred of the M'Donalds here by General Leslie after their capitulation in 1649. Few traces of the castle are now remaining, but a mile and a half west stands the walls of a church, said to have been founded by St. Columba, who landed in Scotland in 563. It was called Cill-Cholum-Chille, and the burial ground was formerly divided by a small stream, on the north side of which the Highlanders were interred, and on the south side the Lowlanders; but that distinction no longer exists. The Marquis of Lorne resides temporary at Machrioch.

On the island of SANDA, about three miles distant, is a lighthouse, said to be the best and most efficient one on the coast. A little to the north of the village stands the parish church, and in the village, the United Presbyterian church. The Board school here is a substantial building, and a well conducted institution. Telegraphic communication is complete between the Mull and the principal places in the county and Glasgow.

TARBERT (EAST AND WEST) WITH THEIR VICINITIES.

TARBERT, or as it is sometimes designated EAST TARBERT, is a small fishing port and village, situated at the head of a fine sheltered harbour on Loch Fyne. It is 139 miles w. of Edinburgh, 37 N. by E. of Campbeltown, 39 s.s.w. of Inverary, and 15 s. of Lochgilphead. The town, or village, may be said to form a semicircle round the harbour—the latter small, and the entrance to it narrow, having several sunken rocks, and consequently difficult of access, but when a vessel has once entered, no water affords more perfect shelter and security. The quays are commodious, and for many years it has been a noted fishing station, particularly for herrings, which are mostly cured for the Glasgow markets. In a commanding situation, overlooking the town and harbour, are the remains of an ancient castle and fortification, formerly a place of great strength, and immediately behind the village, in a southern direction, is a small comfortable Established church; there is also a Free church, and a board school.

The steamer Iona calls here daily on its way to and from Glasgow and Ardrishaig; communication is also constant with Inverary, and a steamer leaves West Tarbert for Islay twice a week; the village is likewise connected by telegraph with Glasgow, Inverary, Oban, Lochgilphead, Campbeltown, and the Island of Islay.

WEST TARBERT is one mile distant, and there, also, is a good quay. It is seated at the head of a loch of the same name, which commences here, and in a circuitous route winds through the mountains to Ardpatrick, beyond which it empties itself into the ocean. The scenery on either side of the loch is remarkably picturesque, embracing mountain, wood and lawn, with an occasional mansion embosomed in foliage. Two roads branch respectively to the east and west sides of the loch. The road to Ardpatrick winds through a fine country, in which many mountains were, by the late much respected owner, Lieutenant General Robert Campbell, planted to their summits. About the sixth mile on this road is Dunmore, the residence of the late William Campbell, Esq.; the house is hid by its plantation from the road, but from its site there is a pleasing view of the loch and the opposite shore. Four miles further on, is the domain of Ardpatrick, the residence of Captain James Carter Campbell, R.N., possessing every requisite for a summer residence. At the foot of this domain is a ferry, by which the traveller may pass to the opposite side of West Tarbert loch. From Ardpatrick a road branches to the west; and at a distance of four miles Carsa is passed, eight miles beyond this is Drimdrissaig, the property of the late Dugald M'Neill, Esq., the efforts of whose predecessor—the late Lachlan M'Neill, Esq.—proved so successful in improving the breeds of cattle, sheep, &c., in this part of the country. A mile and a half beyond Drimdrissaig is Ormsary, the seat of William A. Campbell, Esq. The eastern road runs through the village of West Tarbert to Clachan and Campbeltown. A new road, running by the edge of West Tarbert loch (to save the hill on the main road) past the landing stage of the Islay steamer, will be found a great convenience by passengers going to or returning from Islay. The Royal Mail Coach passes daily both going to East Tarbert and returning to Campbeltown. Near the sixth milestone is the village of WHITEHOUSE, containing a board school, and about half a mile above the village is Stonefield, a fine mansion and extensive domain of Colin G. Campbell, Esq., who is proprietor of the town and neighbourhood of Tarbert. An extensive fair is held at Tarbert on the last Thursday in July which continues three days, and is for the sale of horses. In 1871 Tarbert contained a population of 1,442.

TOBERMORY,

WITH THE ISLANDS OF MULL, STAFFA, IONA, ULVA, TYREE AND COLL, AND THE DISTRICTS OF ARDNAMURCHAN AND MORVEN.

TOBERMORY is a thriving seaport on the north coast of the Island of Mull, 171 miles W.N.W. of Edinburgh, 62 N.W. of Inverary, and 30 N.W. of Oban. It encircles the extremity of a fine sheltered bay, and is one of the safest harbours among the western isles, being protected from the sound of Mull by an island called Calve Island, which stretches nearly across the entrance, but leaving ample room at its northern point for the largest vessels to enter the harbour—though few but small craft can effect this at the south-east point, even at high water. About two miles from Tobermory, in the sound of Mull, a lighthouse called the Runagall, was erected in 1857, which has proved of great service to vessels passing that way. The town is between two and three miles from the mainland of Morven, and derives its name from a celebrated well or spring, called "Mary's Well," to which the vulgar superstitiously ascribe many imaginary virtues. The Spanish admiral's ship Florida, one of the "Armada," when at anchor here in 1588, was destroyed by an emissary of Queen Elizabeth's government: part of the wood of this vessel was presented to His Majesty George IV., on his visit to Edinburgh, by Sir Walter Scott; and there is in the possession of the Duke of Argyll a large brass gun that belonged to the same vessel, and found many years since in Tobermory bay. On the west side of the town are the remains of an ancient chapel, dedicated to the Virgin, and of a fortification, understood to be of Norwegian origin. Tobermory formerly belonged to the British Society for extending the fisheries and improving the sea coast of the kingdom, but is now the property of Alexander Adam, Esq., of Aros. The town, which was built in 1788, along with Ullapool, by the British Fishing Company, as the site of a fishing establishment and the rendezvous of herring vessels, possesses two quays; a new quay was begun in 1835 by Colonel Campbell, of Knock, which was quite dry at low water; this, subsequently proving inadequate, has been absorbed in a new quay and pier, undertaken and constructed by

F. W. Caldwell, Esq., proprietor of this part of the town, at a cost of upwards of £2,000; it is deeper, more capacious, and in every respect an improvement, and was opened in 1864, with offices, stores, waiting rooms, and a cattle pen. It is a little to the north of the old quay, and nearer to the entrance of the bay. The town has increased considerably in this direction of late years, and the harbour is much frequented both by steamers and sailing vessels, which renders better quay accommodation necessary. As the only town in Mull and in a large circumjacent district, both Hebridean and continental, it possesses much provincial importance, and is the seat af a considerable domestic trade. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank is established here, and occupies a handsome building of stone, completed in 1865; is is situated in the main street, and contributes much to the improvement of the town; there are two hotels and two inns, besides a few respectable lodging houses. The church, which was erected in 1827-8 at the expense of parliament, stands in a fine prominent situation, overlooking the bay, and adjoining the church is a parliamentary school, completed in 1832, in which the useful and general branches of education are taught. A female industrial school is also here; there are likewise a Free church and a Baptist chapel. In the immediate neighbourhood is a beautiful loch called Mary's Lake, situate between two finely wooded hills, extremely precipitous in their descent. This pleasing spot belongs to Alexander Allan, Esq. and the elegant mansion, erected on the banks of the lake, is now undergoing extensive repairs. The tourist will be much gratified by visiting this picturesque scenery, including the three cascades, one of which is particularly grand. Commandingly situated above the town are the county buildings, a substantial erection of stone, embracing the prison, sheriff's court, procurator fiscal's offices, &c.; here the sheriff substitute holds an ordinary and small debts court, every Wednesday during sessions; a police court is also held here as business requires. Tobermory is the polling station, at county elections, for all voters residing in the Islands of Mull, Coll, Iona, Tyree, Ulva, and in Morven. By ascending a hill in the neighbourhood a view of the Islands of Tyree, Coll, Eigg, Muck, Skye, and various others of smaller importance. The union poor-house, erected for the reception of the poor of the six surrounding parishes, distant rather better than a mile from Tobermory, is capable of accommodating 130 inmates, and cost £7,700. The quoad sacra parish of Tobermory contained, in 1871, a population of 1,344.

MULL, which is about twenty-six miles long, and in some places twenty-four miles broad, has been much improved of late. Beinmore, the highest mountain in the island, is said to approach 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. The island contains many remains of ancient castles, &c., among which are those of Duart, once the stronghold of the chief of the Macleans, occupying the brink of a high cliff which shoots out from the coast of Mull into the sound, opposite Oban, and Aros castle, the stronghold of the Lords of the Isles. On the western side, close to the Ross of Mull, is worked a quarry of red granite of porphyry, some of which was employed by the Duke of Sutherland in the internal improvements of Dunrobin Castle. Fairs in Mull: At Salen, a large horse fair is held on the first Thursday after the 20th of August, or on the 20th if a Thursday, and for cattle and sheep, on the Tuesday befor the second Wednesday in May, and the Tuesday before the last Wednesday in October; at Craiganure, Morven, and the islands of Coll and Tyree, fairs are held a few days before those at Salen. The Mull Agricultural Association, under the presidency of the Duke of Argyll, hold an annual show of cattle and produce at Salen, about the middle of September. Population in 1871, 5,947.

The celebrated Island of STAFFA is about fifteen miles distant from Mull. To give a description of this magnificent production of nature is, it must be confessed, extremely difficult. All who have seen Fingal's cave concur in the opinion that, when it first bursts upon the view, the effect is indescribable—awe and astonishment so completely fill the mind that there is no room for minor emotions. The island, when seen from a distance, appears a round, lumpish, uninteresting rock, and not till approached within less than a quarter of a mile does it unfold to a visitor the museum of wonders. It is irregularly oval, extending from north to south, and measuring about one mile and a half in circumference; it presents an uneven table-land resting on cliffs of variable height—the highest point occurring between the "Great Cave" and the "Boat." The caves are so numerous that they may be said to perforate at brief intervals the whole face of the island; but those that occur on the south and north sides are remarkable neither for their beauty nor for magnitude, and five on the north-east are distinguished chiefly for making loud reverberations when the surge of the sea breaks into them; the reverberations resemble the distant discharge of heavy ordnance. Proceeding towards the south from the landing place, the objects of chief interest which challenge the visitor's notice and admiration are—first, the Scallop or Clamshell Cave; second, Buachaille, or Herdsman; third, the Causeway and the Face or Colonnade; fourth, Fingal's, or Great Cave; fifth, the Boat Cave; sixth, the Cormorants, or Mackinnon's Cave. At the Scallop or Clamshell Cave, the columns on one side are bent so as to form a series of ribs, not unlike the inside of a ship; it is 30 feet in height, 16 to 18 feet in breadth at the entrance, and its length is about 130 feet. The rock Buachaille the Herdsman is a pile of columns about 30 feet high, visible only at low-water. The Causeway here presents an extensive surface. It is formed of the broken ends of columns, once continuous to the height of the cliffs. This alone exceeds the noted "Giant's Causeway," as well in dimensions as in the diversity of its surface. The Great Face is formed of three distinct beds of rocks, of unequal thickness, inclined towards the east in an angle of about nine degrees. It is only with the morning sun that the Great Face of Staffa can be seen in perfection—as the general surface is undulating and uneven, great masses of light and shadow are thus produced, so as to relieve that which, in direct light, appears a flat, insipid mass of strong wall. The Cormorants, or Mackinnon's Cave (though little visited in consequence of the fraud and indolence of the boatmen) is easy of access, and terminates in a gravelly beach, where a boat may be drawn up. The Boat Cave is accessible only by the sea. Staffa is visited five or six times a week by the steamboat from Oban; the visitors are generally landed at Fingal's Cave, and stay about an hour on the island to examine its wonders.

The far-famed Island of IONA, or ICOLMKILL, or ICCLUMB-KILL, or I (pronounced Ee), the Island of the CELL OF COLUMBA, the earth of which may be termed royal, is about three miles in length and one and a half in breadth. It was once the luminary of the Caledonian regions, "whence savage clans and roving barbarians derived the benefits of knowledge and the blessings of religion." It is separated from Mull by a channel of about a mile in width; it is 9 miles south-west of Staffa, and about 36 west of the nearest part of the district called Morven, on the mainland of Scotland, and is resorted to during summer by the antiquarian, the historian, the tourist, and even the fashionable—who crowd numerously, some to explore or examine, and others to behold and admire the sacred ruins that on landing arrest the attention of every stranger; these are pointed out by a person deputed by His Grace the Duke of Argyll. Here the visitor finds himself surrounded by the graves of those who were royal and noble and holy in Caledonia and Hibernia a thousand years ago; while the thick walls, the massive arches, and the finely-wrought pillars of the many sacred edifices which, in remote ages, flourished in this sanctified isle, supply the deepest reflections, and awaken the most solemn feelings in the contemplative mind. A parliamentary church was erected here in 1828, and there is also a parliamentary school. The inhabitants have made a profitable traffic by disposing of the channel pebbles to visitors, who now frequent the island. They assert that the pebbles of a certain appearane are endowed with many secret virtues, given to them by their tutelar Saint, Columba. Population in 1871, 296.

PORT-NA-CURRACH, "The Bay of the Boat," on the south-west side, derives both its name and importance from a tradition of its having been the landing place of the currach, the hide boat of St. Columba.

The Isle of ULVA, separated from Mull by a channel of about one hundred yards broad, is said to produce the best kelp in the Western Islands. There is a great number of basaltic columns on the shore, and on the south side is a cave 60 feet long, 58 broad, and 30 in average height, having an arched entrance in the face of an abrupt rock, with a span of 37 feet. About a mile to the north, a mountain stream falls in one unbroken descent from a rock 66 feet in height, directly into the sea. Thr island is now the property of Francis William Clark, Esq.. J.P., who resides there.

TYREE, westward of Mull, and distant 30 miles from Tobermory, is a very fertile island, fourteen miles long, and from one to five broad; it abounds in marble, of which, it is said, the rocks on its shore are entirely composed; but, from some unexplained cause, the quarries cannot be profitably worked. In the churchyard at Soroby, is a beautiful monumental cross, inscribed "Soror Anna Abbatissa de Y." A new harbour is formed at Heynish; the quay was commenced in 1836; the accommodation is, however, deemed insufficient. A lighthouse was likewise raised on the dangerous rocks called Skerryvore, which lie about sixteen miles south-west of Tyree; it is of granite, obtained from the quarries of Mull, and is considered one of the best and most durable specimens of this kind of architecture in Europe; the light is dioptric. Fairs are held in May on the Wednesday before that at Mull, in August on the Monday, and in October on the Wednesday before those in Mull. Population in 1871, 2,834.

COLL, to the north of Tyree, is rather a sterile and mountainous island; it is fourteen miles in length, and about two and a half in breadth, and seven miles distant from Mull. On it are the ruins of a castle, which appear to advantage from the sea. A fair is held here in May, on the Tuesday before those in Mull. Population, 723.

ARDNAMURCHAN is chiefly known from the dangers frequently encountered in the navigation around its projecting point, particularly in boisterous weather, when the tremendous billows of the North Atlantic break against it with awful fury; it is a district of considerable length, having Loch Sunart to the south, the Altantic to the west, the same ocean and Loch Shiel to the north, and Ardgour to the east. It is sterile, but feeds large flocks of sheep, and some cattle, and the hills are stated to be rich in minerals. Upon the point has been erected a lighthouse by the Commissioners of the Northern lights, which is of great service to the navigation of this perilous coast.

At STRONTIAN, fairs are held in May on Thursday before last Wednesday; June, on Friday after third Thursday (o.s.); August, for lambs, on Wednesday, if 12th, if not, following Wednesday; and October on Thursday before last Wednesday. In 1871 Ardnamurchan had a population of 2,293.

MORVEN is an extensive district, bounded on the south-west by the sound of Mull, on the north by Loch Sunart, and on the east and south-east by Loch Linnhe. The country is hilly, and its shores are partially wooded. It is principally occupied in grazing farms, and contains several respectable gentlemen's seats, but no village of sufficent consequence to command attention.

In concluding our brief sketch of these interesting and not wholly unimportant islands, and the parallel districts on the mainland, we may observe that the scenery connected with them is of a description not easily to be forgotten by those who have once visited them; it is faithfully portrayed by the incomparable Scott in his "Lord of the Isles." Ardtornish Castle, in Morven, so often alluded to by the bard, is well worthy the tourist's notice; as are the interesting remains of Aros Castle, the ancient residence of the Kings or Lords of the Isles—and Castle Duart, formerly the residence of the M'Leans, in Mull, with Castle Doonan, in the district of Lismore.

AYRSHIRE.

THIS is a populous maritime county, on the western coast of the lowlands; stretching upwards of seventy miles along the shore of the Frith of Clyde, from Kelly-burn on the north, to Galloway-burn, which enters Loch Ryan, on the south; its middle part, which is the broadest, extends about twenty miles across. It is bounded on the north and north-east by the small county of Renfrew, on the east by the counties of Lanark and Dumfries, on the south-east by the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and on the south by Wigtonshire. In figure the county resembles an elongated crescent, with its concavity presented to the sea. At the north and south ends the land is diminished almost to a point, being but a few miles in breadth. The superficial extent of the county comprises about 1,050 square miles of land, and six lakes. It is divided into three principal or grand districts—Carrick, Cunningham, and Kyle. The first lies on the southern side of the Doon; the second comprehends the whole of the county north of the river Irvine, and Kyle division is situate between the rivers Doon and Irvine.

EARLY HISTORY.—This county was anciently inhabited by the British tribe called the Damnii, a branch of the Celtic nation, who survived the period of the Roman yoke, and were, in the course of time, over-run by and amalgamated with the Scoto-Irish from Kintyre. In 750 these again were partly conquered by a body of Northumbrians, who settled in Kyle. From 843 to 1097, the inhabitants of Ayrshire were governed as a Celtic people, on Celtic principles. Upon the accession of Edgar, in 1097, the jurisprudence of the county became changed, and an active colonization commenced, which peopled every district with new comers from England. Barons now sprung up, who built castles and churches, and towns arose, which became inhabited by persons engaged in trade. Ayrshire was the scene of perpetual turmoil during the wars of Bruce and Edward. The son of the first Bruce marrying the Countess of Carrick, became Earl Carrick in her right; and it was their son who, on the expulsion of Baliol, formed pretensions to the throne, which he obtained by his courage, fortitude, and prudence; thus Ayrshire possessed the honour of giving birth to the illustrious restorer of the Scottish monarchy. Some of the valorous exploits of Wallace, in supporting the national independence, were performed in this county. Scarcely any division of Scotland remained so long under the torments of the baronial system as Ayrshire. For centuries the chiefs were perpetually engaged in feuds and rebellions, and so weak or inefficient were the laws that it was seldom redress or punishment followed outrage. The Boyds, the Dalrymples, the Campbells, the Colvilles, and the houses of Eglinton and Glencairn, had their respective quarrels of long standing, which occasionally ended in reckless violence or sanguinary slaughter. A great proportion of these disturbances arose from contests regarding heritable jurisdictions, such as stewardships and bailliewicks of certain districts. Besides the feuds of these pugnatious barons, the country was frequently distracted by the pride or crimes of the Kennedys. So late as the reign of James VI. this powerful clan was involved in a feud of more than ordinary importance, which originated in the cruel treatment of Allan Stewart, the commendator of Crossraguell, in 1570, by the Earl of Cassillis, and his brother, Thomas Kennedy, of Culzean. The vexations which the people of this county so long suffered by such an ill-organized system seem to have impressed them with a fervid desire for those political liberties which they believed were to accrue from the institution of the Covenant. The consequence was that, during the heats of the seventeenth century, few took so active a share in the insurrections which were opposed to royal authority. A committee of the privy council sat at Ayr in 1678, for directing the military execution to its proper objects. In July, 1680, a conflict occurred, wherein several insurgents were taken, and the rebellion on this occasion quelled. Proceedings of this harassing character induced a ready accession to the government of William III., and the conduct of the people who went armed to Edinburgh, to wait upon the Estates, was very magnanimous. It need hardly be mentioned the turmoils which had from a very early period kept Ayrshire in warlike attitude, and ever ready for tidings of disaster and spoliation, had the natural effect of keeping its agricultural capacities long shut up, and its energies of a useful tendency long untried.

SOIL, SURFACE, &C.—The most fertile part of the shire is the great vale of Cunningham, which is comparatively level; Kyle possesses much valuable land towards the coast, but its interior lies high, and is a rough mountainous territory; Carrick is a hilly wild region throughout, and is only of value or interest in its northern angle, betwixt the rivers Doon and Girvan. In a general sense, the whole district of Ayrshire is shut out, on its eastern boundary, from the adjacent counties, by high ridgy land; and, with little variation, the surface inclines either to the sea or to the rivers which flow in that direction. The sea coast is mostly sandy, and indented with several excellent harbours. Abundance of seaweed is thrown on the shore, from which great quantities of kelp are annually made; and the coasts are admirably adapted for white fishing. In the rocks are several remarkable caves, worthy the inspection of the curious. The principal eminences are, Knock-Dolton, 930; Knock-Nounan, 1,540; Carleton, 1,554; Knock-Dow, 1,554; Cairntable, 1,660; and Knock-Dollian, 2,000 feet above the level of the sea. There are many elegant seats belonging to the nobility and gentry of the kingdom; among the principal owners are the Earl of Glasgow, the Earl of Eglinton, the Marquis of Ailsa, Lord Lieutenant of the county, the Duke of Portland, the Marquis of Bute, and the noble family of Hastings. To the south of Irvine stands the ancient castle of Dundonald, once a royal residence, and afterwards the family seat of the Cochranes, Earls of Dundonald. The ancient castle of Rowallan is a few miles distant from Kilmarnock, and stands almost on the boundary line which separates the parishes of Kilmarnock, Fenwick, and Kilmaurs. Dean Castle, the former residence of the Kilmarnock family, is still an interesting ruin.

PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, MINERALS, &C.—It was not until about the middle of the eighteenth century that the inhabitants of Ayrshire began to discover and avail themselves of its capabilities as an agricultural district. The settlement, at this period, of Margaret, Countess of Loudoun, in Lorn Castle, may be deemed the epoch of efficient improvement; by her great assiduity, precept and example, agriculture was promoted and encouraged; and in a short time the nobility and gentry of Ayrshire began in earnest to improve their estates upon systematic principles, under the skilful directions of intelligent stewards. Farmers were invited by them from more southern shires to instruct the tenantry in the management of land according to the most approved methods of the experienced agriculturist. Observing the peculiarities of the climate, and ascertaining the nature of the soil, the judicious culture of the various species of grasses became a primary object, and the general adoption of dairy farms was the natural consequence; this system has been persevered in, and the dairies in this district are superior, perhaps, to any others in Scotland: the value of their produce in milk and butter is very considerable, and "Dunlop" cheese is unrivalled throughout the country, finding a ready market wheresoever offered, and Ayrshire may now be reckoned as the Cheshire of Scotland. Latterly, under the auspices of the County Agricultural Association, and many individual proprietors, of whom the late Mr. Campbell, of Craigie, was one of the foremost, the Cheddar method has been very generally introduced, and with very great success; so that Cheddar cheese is one of the staple productions of the county. The breed of cattle has likewise been much improved; the Ayrshire short-horns being much prized both for the purposes of the dairy and the butcher. As agriculture thus successfully progressed, excellent roads were formed, and these have recently been followed up by railways for the transmission of goods and persons; a line has been formed as far as Girvan, which it is expected will be carried on to Stranraer. From the fostered spirit of industry, and the enhanced value of land, resulted in a corresponding exertion for the establishment of manufactures; the abundance of fuel, the plenty and cheapness of the necessaries of life, materials for building, and means of transit to the large towns in the adjacent shires, presented facilities for this purpose which were obvious and encouraging. The manufacture of stockings, carpets, cloths, and bonnets extended generally, but Kilmarnock became the most noted. At the capital of the county have been established dyeworks, woollen manufactories, iron foundries, extensive and numerous steam-engine manufactories and chemical works; at Catrine, well-known and extensive cotton works; at Cumnock is an extensive pottery; at Irvine, a large brick and drain tile manufactory, likewise a chain, cable, and anchor works, and Muirkirk is noted for its ponderous iron works. During the thirty years between 1841 and 1871, the population of this county has increased upwards of 36,000. This large addition to the population is in a great measure owing to the prosperous manufacturing state of the county. Ayrshire possesses inexhaustible coalfields, freestone quarries, and ironstone mines, with several rich ores, particularly those of lead and copper; Marble, gypsum, and marl have been found, and black lead has been discovered; fire-proof stone and whetstone are obtained, and petrefactions exist in various parts of the county. In the hills of Carrick are agates, porphyries, and other valuable fossils; and traces of antimony have not escaped the searching eye of the mineralogist.

RIVERS, LAKES, SPRINGS AND RAILWAYS.—In the ridge of the hills which intersect the district of Carrick, almost all the rivers in the south originate. The Tweeed, the Esk, the Nith, the Annan, the Urr, and others flow to the east and south; while the Strinchar, the Girvan, the Doon, the Ayr, and the Lugar, traverse the county, and pour their fruitful streams into the Irish Channel. Besides these, the Irvine, and some smaller rivers, water the northern parts of Ayrshire. All these abound with salmon, trout, and other fresh water fish. In the midst of so many minerals, a number of springs impregnated by their qualities are to be expected; and indeed almost every parish has its mineral water, though none have attained the dignity of spas. There are various inland lakes, particularly in Carrick—the most extensive being Loch Doon, from whence the Doon river flows. Ayrshire participates extensively in the conveniences afforded to commerce and general transit by railways, and there are several important lines and branches now in operation, and others progressing. The Glasgow and South-Western gives communication between the North and Greenock, Glasgow and Paisley, and as it passes through the county, with all parts south—Kilmarnock, Beith, Kilwinning, Dalry, Kilbirnie, Stevenston, Saltcoats, Ardrossan, Irvine, Ayr, Maybole, Girvan, and Dalmellington, are all stations either on the main line, or are communicated with by means of branches. There are also other branches, viz.:—from Kilmarnock to Kilwinning, from Ayr to Kilmarnock, via Troon, from Kilmarnock to Newmilnes, and from Ayr to Mauchline, together with others of minor importance.

ECCLESIASTICAL AND CIVIL DIVISIONS, POPULATION, &C.—The whole of Ayrshire was formerly comprehended in the bishopric of Glasgow: and it formed three deaneries, corresponding with the three divisions before mentioned. The county now comprises forty-six parishes, forming two presbyteries in the Synod of Ayr and Glasgow. The Contributory burghs (or those which, in conjunction with others, are represented in the Senate) belonging to this county are Ayr and Irvine; three members also represent the shire at large. The present county members are, for the Northern division, William Finnie, Esq. and the Honourable R. Montgomerie, and for the Southern division, Colonel Alexander. The whole county comprises an area of 722,229 statute acres and by the government returns for 1861 contained a population of 198,971, and by those for 1871, 200,809.

ARDROSSAN,

A WATERING place and maritime port in the parish of its name, is pleasantly situated on the western shore of Ayrshire, on an accessible point of the coast, and only a mile west of Saltcoats, which occupies another promontory; it is 74 miles s.w. of Edinburgh, 30 s.w. of Glasgow, 25 s.s.w. of Paisley, and 8 N. by w. of Irvine. The town is built upon a plan of regularity and taste; the houses all of stone and of commanding altitude. The visitants in the bathing season will find all the appliances necessary to their enjoyment. The baths include the customary varieties, and are enclosed in a handsome building, both spacious and commodious. The town is chiefly indebted for its existence to the noble family of Eglinton, who had formerly a castle of great strength and extent in the vicinity, but which is now a ruin, the earl having a mansion in the town. There are a large number of villas, many of which exhibit considerable taste in design; and the town is extending in all directions. A large and elegant hotel, with a suite of warm and cold baths, was erected by the late Lord Eglinton, at an expense of £10,000. The public rooms, the bed rooms, offices, and stabling are most commodious. There are three banking establishments—that of the Bank of Scotland is a commanding building adjoining the hotel; the Royal Bank building is near to the railway station, and is also a fine building; and the City of Glasgow Bank, at the end of Princes-street, is also a prominent object. The harbour was commenced under the auspices of the before-named munificent patron, who expended nearly £90,000 upon it, and became the sole proprietor both of it and the town, as well as the extensive barony of Ardrossan. It has been greatly extended, and the yearly increasing business of the port renders probable another considerable extension at no distant date. The tide harbour will contain from fifty to sixty vessels. The dock occupies an extent of seven Scotch acres, and will admit fifty vessels of from three to six hundred tons burden. Steamers ply regularly between Ardrossan and several parts of Ireland; there is daily intercourse during the greater part of the year between it and the island of Arran; and the steamers plying between Ayr and Glasgow call at the port during the summer months. There are two yards for ship-building at the harbour, a large ironfoundry, and some extensive timber yards and saw mills. A railway from this port to Kilwinning forms a junction with the Glasgow, Kilmarnock and Ayr railway, and the line is continued from the station to the harbour for the transit of coals and iron to the vessels. A new railway is also being formed between Ardrossan and West Kilbride, and from thence to Fairlie. The church, at the entrance to the town from Saltcoats, is in elegant taste, and is a highly ornamental edifice. There are four other churches, viz., the English Episcopal, United Presbyterian, Free, and Independent. There has recently been erected at the head of the town, a handsome and commodious school, under the Scotch Education Act, built to accommodate about 670 children. In the neighbourhood is a chalybeate spring, whose medicinal properties are beneficial in cases of debility, scrofula, &c. The picturesque ruins of Ardrossan Castle stand on an eminence overlooking the town. There is also upon an adjoining eminence, a handsome monument, erected to a deceased philanthropic gentleman, who, during the latter years of his life, interested himself deeply in the various institutions connected with the town. An agricultural society has been established here, and a coursing club formed. A fair is held on the Tuesday before Ayr, which is in July. There is also a weekly grain market. Population of the parish in 1871, 7,221; of the town, 3,845.

POST OFFICE, 47 Princes-street, James Stevens, Post Master.—Arrival of the Mails: From all parts at seven morning; from England, the South, and all parts at half-past nine morning; from Arran (on the day the steamer arrives) at seven evening; and from Edinburgh, Glasgow, and all Scotland at seven evening. Despatch of the Mails: To West Kilbride at half-past five morning; to Arran at twenty minutes before nine morning; to Edinburgh, Glasgow, and south of Scotland at five minutes before eleven morning; to Glasgow, Edinburgh, England, Ireland, foreign and all parts at five minutes before two afternoon; to Glasgow, north of Ireland and north of Scotland, also to Kilmarnock, Paisley, Ayr, and Dalry at a quarter before five evening; to England, Ireland, and foreign parts at seven evening; to Scotland and north of England at eight evening. Sunday, to all parts at twenty minutes before seven evening.

Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

AYR,

THE BURGH OF NEWTON, THE PARISHES OF SAINT QUIVOX AND MONKTON, THE TOWNS OF PRESTWICK AND WALLACETOWN, AND SURROUNDING NEIGHBOURHOODS.

AYR is a royal burgh, and the capital of the county and parish of that name, 77 miles w.s.w. of Edinburgh, 33 s.s.w. of Glasgow, 34 s.s.w. of Paisley, 12 s.s.w. of Kilmarnock, and 11 s. of Irvine; situated in the north-west angle of the parish, where the river Ayr flows past it into the Frith of Clyde. This portion of Scotland has been inhabited from the earliest period of authentic history; for when, in the reign of Severus, the Roman fleet made the complete seaboard survey of Magna Britannica, this part of the coast was crowded with a population that evinced no amicable disposition towards the foreign intruder; subsequently, however, the persevering and insidious encroacher penetrated through southern Caledonia, and the Celtic harp was hushed by the fanning wings of the Roman eagle: accordingly we find that the site of modern Ayr retained, in the 11th century, the undoubted traces of a Roman station, and tradition informs us that a hamlet, the vestige of this station, was in existence until the latter part of the 12th century, when William, surnamed the Lion, erased the odious blot, and laid the foundation of a new town in the ashes of the former conqueror. Here it was that the renowned William Wallace first openly embodied that hardy host which made the Southern "backward reel," and the powerful garrison of Edward I. was compelled to cower under his "thunder arm." There is still a remnant of the venerable church of St. John, converted by Cromwell into a fort. Attached to the old tower of St. John is a handsome residence in the old baronial style, so that this old remnant of a bygone age is likely to survive for many generations to come. At a short distance on the southern shore is "Greenan Castle," one of those uncouthly constructed square castles so frequently arresting the attention of the stranger in this district; it stands on the summit of a rock overhanging the sea, and, from a distance, has an imposing aspect. In the same direction, on a clear day, may be discerned the celebrated Ailsa Craig, rising 950 feet perpendicularly out of the sea. The bay of Ayr is very much admired, and its graceful curve bears a striking resemblance to the beautiful bay of Naples. The river is crossed by two bridges—the one of five arches, with balustrades, has few rivals for chaste beauty. Immediately opposite, across the Frith of Clyde, is the Island of Arran, whose majestic mountains present some features of the sublime, and whose summits are visible to the naked eye, in fine weather, from the headlands of Larne, in the county of Antrim, in Ireland. The most conspicuous decoration of the town is the lofty spire, that rises to a height of two hundred and nineteen feet above the Towns'buildings, which were erected in 1828, at a cost of £10,000; these buildings contain a spacious suite of assembly-rooms, and a public reading-room. The noble tower, called "Wallace Tower," in High street, is another ornamental structure; it is embellished with a statue by Thom of the hero whose name it bears. A second statue of this warrior occupies a niche in the wall of a house in the corner of New Market street Wellington square is a fine quadrangle, having a noble erection to form the west side in the court-house and hall, built at the joint expense of the county and burgh, at a cost exceeding £30,000. The east front of this edifice, which is wholly of stone, is ornamented with an imposing portico. A verdant lawn forms the centre of the square, enclosed with iron railing, and the surrounding houses are inhabited by the genteeler families of the place. Two fine statues in bronze have been placed within the square— one to the memory of the late Right Hon. Archibald William Earl of Eglinton and Winton, who was Lord Lieutenant of the county, also for some years Viceroy of Ireland, and who died in 1861; the other is to the memory of the late Brigadier General J. G. Neill, C.B. and aide-de-camp to the Queen, who was killed at Lucknow on the 25th of September, 1857, and who was born in one of the houses in Wellington square, A large gun, captured at Sebastopol, is placed on an iron carriage at the upper end of the square. In the County buildings are the public offices, in which are kept the records of the town; and here are held the borough sessions and the courts for the county and burgh. The county gaol is a commodious structure, at the back of the County buildings, its front looking upon the bay; it is arranged upon the most modern approved system of discipline. Considerable additions to the town, especially to the westward, have been built within the last few years. Many neat villas give accommodation to the natives of Glasgow and other inland localities, who repair to this fine watering place during the summer months.

An extensive trade is carried on in the export of coal from this place to Ireland. Mines of this article, as well as fine quarries of stone, abound in the neighbourhood. The other principal exports consist of iron, coal-tar, lampblack, and water of Ayr stone. Its imports comprise hides, tallow, barley, yarn, linen, spars, deals and hemp. The convenience for shipping is superior to most of the towns on the coast, as the harbour has been much improved by carrying an extensive stone pier into the sea, affording a greater depth of water for vessels entering, and security when in the harbour. There is also a new dock being built, eight acres in extent, with a quayage of 2,000 feet, at the estimated cost of £150,000; depth of water at low tide 15 feet.

The civil government of Ayr is vested in a provost, four baillies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and eighteen councillers. Ayr is connected with the burgh of Irvine, in this county, and Campbeltown, Inverary and Oban, in Argyleshire, in returning a member to parliament—the present representative is Sir William J. M. Cuninghame, Bart. The Lord Lieutenant of the county is the Right Hon. the Earl of Stair, vice Lieutenant R. F. F. Campbell, Esq., and Neill C. Campbell, Esq. is the sheriff. There are two members for the county, the gentlemen at present sitting being Roger Montgomerie, Esq., for North Ayrshire, with 3,339 voters; and Colonel C. Alexander, for South Ayrshire, with 3,535 voters.

An academy, founded by subscription in 1798, stands foremost amongst the public establishments. It is conducted by a rector and five masters, with able assistants; the superintendence of the whole is vested in certain directors appointed by the Crown, by which the seminary was created a body corporate. The Latin, Greek English, French and Italian languages, writing, arithmetic, drawing, geography, navigation, mathematics, &c. are taught in this institution. Ayr library, which contains several thousand volumes, affords recreation to its numerous subscribers; it is now combined with the public library and reading room in Macneille buildings, New Market street, to which strangers are admitted on payment of one penny each visit. There are other libraries of lesser note, and public reading-rooms in the Town buildings. Three newspapers are published in Ayr, namely, the Ayr Observer, on Tuesday and Saturday; the Advertiser, on Thursday, and the Argus and Express, on Saturday. Races are held here annually in autumn; an excellent pack of harriers hunt in the county, and in the town are spirited curling and bowling clubs.

There are two churches of the Establishment in the town, one in the parish of NEWTON, one in WALLACETOWN, and another in MONKTON. The other places of worship in Ayr and its vicinity are for the Free church, the United Presbyterians, the Episcopalians, Reformed Presbyterians, Methodists, Moravians, and Roman Catholics. The charitable institutions are numerous and liberally conducted: the poor are assisted from funds arising from lands and donations, and a dispensary gives medicine and surgical aid to the sick. Besides these, there are a sailors' society, instituted in 1581; a merchants' society, established in 1655; a fund formed in 1821, for decayed members, their widows and orphans, the Ayr Sabbath School Union Society, and the Ayr Universal Society.

The Scottish bard, Robert Burns, whose 100th anniversary, was so universally celebrated throughout the civilized world on the 25th of January, 1859, was born about two miles south of Ayr, in a small cottage, now converted into a public house; about a quarter of a mile from the house a very elegant monument has been erected to his memory; it is placed on the banks of the river Doon, amidst objects and scenery which had often inspired his muse; and the locality in which the scene was laid of his much-admired poem "Tam O'Shanter" lies in the immediate neighbourhood of the cottage. In the summer season this place is visited by strangers from nearly all parts, anxious to view the monument, Alloway's Auld Haunted Kirk, and the Brig o' Doon. An elegant and commodious parish church has been erected close to the monument, of which the Rev. John Lochead is pastor. The Chevalier Ramsay, author of "Cyrus' Travels", &c. was a native of the town. The parish of Ayr comprises about 7,200 acres.

There are two weekly markets in the town—Tuesday for grain, cattle, and dairy produce, and Friday, for the sale of dairy produce, poultry, and general business. Fairs are held on the Thursday and Friday before the second Wednesday in January; on the first Tuesday in April, for black-cattle, &c.; the last Friday in April; the Thursday and Friday before the second Monday in July, and on the second Thursday and Friday in October, Population of the parish in 1871 9,589, of the town 17,954

NEWTON parish is divided from that of Ayr by the river, over which there is a handsome bridge of modern erection. Weaving is carried on here in a small way for the Glasgow manufacturers; here are also engineering works, iron foundries, and a ship-building yard. The coals from the Ayr collieries are shipped on this side of the harbour; the colliery is in the parish of St. Quivox, and, from the employment it furnishes to the industrious class, is of material importance to the neighbourhood. Acreage about 696. Population of the parish in 1871 4,877.

SAINT QUIVOX, a populous parish in the district of Kyle, lies on the banks of the Ayr river, and is bounded on the east by Tarbolton, and on the west by Newton of Ayr and Monckton. The parish, which is nearly all arable, is finely enclosed and beautified by plantations, and contains about 4,930 acres. Population in 1871, 6,069.

The small town (or rather village) of PRESTWICK or Prestevick, is one mile and a half from Ayr. It was at one period a place of some consequence, having been created a burgh of barony at an early date; and its charter, which was renewed by James VI. in 1660, granted to it a weekly market and an annual fair. The former has fallen into disuse, from the proximity of its more thriving neighbour, Ayr. The market cross, which is of considerable antiquity, still exists; and it has its gaol and council house. In the latter the baillies and freemen meet quarterly to regulate the affairs of the burgh; and the Prince of Wales is recognised as the superior of the town. There is a handsome church for the accommodation of the combined inhabitants of Monkton and Prestwick. Several years ago a golf club was formed here, and it has now about one hundred members, comprising some of the best players in Scotland and England. Close to the village is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western line of railway. Population in 1871, 750.

WALLACETOWN consists of a number of streets adjoining to Newton, and is in the parish of St. Quivox. A church of the Establishment was erected in Wallacetown in 1834, and opened on the 8th of March, 1836; it is a very handsome edifice, of the Gothic order. The site is well chosen, being in a populous neighbourhood, on the north-east bank of the river Ayr. It was built by subscription, at an expense of nearly £1,500, and has sittings for upwards of eight hundred persons. Nearly adjoining this church is a Roman Catholic chapel, erected in 1826-7 at a cost of about £2,000 it is a chaste structure, in the Gothic style, fronted with freestone; In Wallacetown are also chapels belonging to the United Presbyterians, Reformed Presbyterians, and Independents.

MONKTON, a parish in the district of Kyle, lies on the sea coast, betwixt Symington and Dundonald on the north, and Newton and St. Quivox on the south. The parish formerly extended southward to the river Ayr, and comprehended the present parish of Newton, which was erected into a separate parochial district in the last century; it now includes the ancient and abrogated parish of PRESTWICK. The village of Monkton is situated on the high road to Glasgow, and distant four miles from Ayr. There is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway about a mile from the village. Acreage of parish 3,971. Population of the joint quoad sacra parish of Monkton and Prestwick in 1871, 1,744.
